DEFENCE HAS FINISHED IN SPENCER CASE

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 22—After two stormy outbreaks by Bertram G. Spencer, on direct and against Attorney-General Swift, and the other addressed to Judge Crosby, when defence at noon to-day rested its case.

Dr. Kenneth W. Courtenay and Dr. L. Vernon Briggs of Boston followed Dr. Edward T. Loney on the witness stand, and testified that Spencer was controlled by an irresistible impulse when he shot Miss Harriet B. Blackstone, that he was insane and was not responsible.

Then government began its rebuttal testimony shortly after noon, prominent citizens of Lebanon, Ct., Spencer's home town, being placed on the witness stand to contradict the testimony of the defence that Spencer himself, as well as his parents and ancestors, was erratic and peculiar.

Did Not Deny Shooting.

The defence rested without denying that Spencer fired the shot on March 3, 1910, that blotted out the life of Miss Blackstone and the shot that wounded Miss Harriet Dow. The confession of Spencer to his fifteen burglaries in Springfield was not questioned by the defence.

Following the resting of the case by the government the defence will introduce testimony in rebuttal of evidence presented by the government.

The case of the defence will go before the jury upon the simple question of whether Spencer was insane or not, and whether or not he was mentally responsible when he murdered Miss Blackstone.

Spencer again broke into uncontrollable fury to-day while Attorney-General Swift was questioning Dr. Edward P. Lane, an alienist called by the defence, and almost jumped out of the prisoner's cage in his rage. Dr. Lane swore that Spencer is insane and was at the time he committed the murder.

Dr. L. Vernon Briggs was the last witness called by the defence. The alienist declared that when Spencer shot Miss Blackstone he was acting under an "irresistible impulse"; that he has been and is insane.

Swift turned to Spencer several times and pointed at him. There was an undeniable sneer on the face of the Attorney-General. Spencer became angrier and angrier. Finally he leaped to his feet and jumped out of the cage, getting across the front of the cage all except his feet, which were caught by Turnkey Wade.

Women in the courtroom shrieked in terror. Two or three of them fainted. The courtroom was in an uproar. Spencer shrieked vile names at the Attorney-General. The wife of the prisoner caught hold of him and tried to quiet him.

Cries "Let Me Alone."

"Let me alone—let me alone," he cried, shaking his wife off. "I'm all right."

Spencer was finally quieted and Attorney-General Swift continued questioning Dr. Lane.

Q.—Well, doctor, an insane person if one without reason, isn't he? A.—Yes, that goes without saying, but nobody knows just what insanity is.

Q.—What does the term imbecile mean? A.—An insane person has no responsible mind. An idiot has a low grade of intellect. An imbecile suffers from arrested mental development. This "arrested development may date from childhood or it may begin in after life.

Q.—What is a high-grade imbecile? A.—One who may have acute mental power with that power arrested.

Q.—What do you call a mental defect? A.—I never use the term.

Q.—Didn't you hear Dr. Houston and Dr. Elliott use it? A.—Yes; but I scarcely ever heard it before.

Might Be the Same.

Q.—Would you call a high-grade imbecile a mental defect? A.—They might be the same. If anything, a mental defect might define a delinquent in a broader sense than high-grade imbecile.

Q.—When did you arrive at your conclusions regarding Spencer's condition? A.—After my second examination.

Q.—Was one definite thing led you to arrive at your decision that Spencer is insane? A.—No one thing; it was the general result of my two examinations.

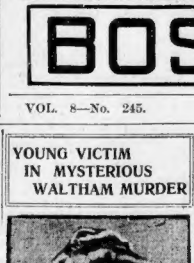
YOUNG VICTIM IN MYSTERIOUS WALTHAM MURDER



Miss Giovanina Nattoli, who was shot to death at the supper table.

STATE POLICE HUNT SLAYER

The State police to-day took charge of the investigation of the mysterious murder of Giovanina Nattoli, who was shot last night while seated at the supper table in her sister's home in Waltham. Officer Silas N. Smith of the State police went to Waltham and directed the search, both there and in Boston, for Dominic Beninati, the girl's sweetheart, who has been missing since the murder.

Freeing Miss Nattoli from unwelcome attentions is believed to have led to the murder of the girl.

The girl's uncle, with whom she lived, says that he wrote a letter, purporting to be from the girl from her father in Italy. Yesterday noon the girl showed this letter to Beninati. It was signed with the name of Miss Nattoli's father and told her not to marry Beninati.

Charge Threats Against the Girl.

When Miss Nattoli showed Beninati this letter yesterday noon and told him it came from her father, he said he didn't believe it. He suspected the uncle wrote it and signed the father's name. The police say that Beninati made renewed threats against the girl. Six hours later, while she was eating supper, Miss Nattoli was shot.

The Waltham police think Beninati is headed for New York. They telephoned description of him to the New York police to-day, with request that they keep lookout for him. Beninati is a Sicilian. He may have gone to the large Sicilian colony in Brooklyn.

Although several people were seated about the supper table, none saw the man who fired the shots. They were terrified to see the man's arm thrust through the door of the dining room. The fist clutched a revolver. Before anyone could even gasp, the revolver spurted fire and Miss Nattoli moaned. As she reeled in her chair, the revolver was fired again. The second bullet entered the woodwork.

The police immediately started search for Beninati, who is twenty years old, who has been trying to get the girl to marry him for the last eight months, ever since she came to America.

When the police went to Beninati's room they found everything packed up as if in readiness for removal. Further investigation disclosed the fact that he had withdrawn all his savings, $250, from the Waltham Savings Bank.

Withdrew His Savings.

Beninati came to America nearly four years ago. He has been living in Waltham since, recently at No. 19 Spring street. He has always been industrious, and has borne a good reputation at the Boston Manufacturing Company's Cotton Mills, where he was employed.

He had told his fellows that he was engaged to a girl back in Italy, and when the Nattoli girl came to Waltham, eight months ago, it was generally thought that Beninati had sent for her, and money had furnished the money for her passage.

When he asked her to marry him, the girl who had found work in the same cotton mill, wrote home to her mother for advice. The mother told her not to marry him, because a feud had existed between the two families. Beninati persisted. He was a frequent visitor at her sister's house, insisting at each visit that the girl marry him.

When she refused him a month ago, it is claimed, he told her that he would kill her. The girl became frightened and tried to avoid him. The police say he threatened her again last week. Her sister had forbidden him the house and the girl was told to avoid him.

KING GEORGE'S CHAPLAIN IS AN ABSCONDER

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The Rev. Frederick Percival Farrar, son of the late Canon Farrar, domestic chaplain to the royal family of England and married only last July to Miss Nora Davis, sister of Richard Harding Davis, the American author, is an absconder, according to charges made public to-day.

A warrant for his arrest has been issued. The London Gazette contains notice of his dismissal from his post as royal chaplain. An investigation into the chaplain's private conduct has been going on for some time. It is said that sensational revelations as to his moral standing are imminent.

The news of the alleged delinquencies of the prominent clergymen has amazed English society. The church element is horrified. The American set here, many of whose most distinguished representatives attended the Farrar-Davis nuptials at St. Andrew's, Westminster, six months ago, is tremendously stirred by the manner in which the happiness of another American bride has been wrecked.

The royal household feels the situation most keenly. It was only last Sunday that the dismissed chaplain preached in Sandringham church before Queen Alexandra, the Dowager; her daughter, Queen Maud of Norway, the Prince of Wales, and other members of royalty.

Friend of Royal Family.

The chaplain was very intimate, by nature of his post, with the King, Queen and all their relatives here. That the family chaplain should figure in such disgraceful charges as are now made is very humiliating.

Chaplain Farrar was courted by the American set because it was known his approval meant much at court. When he married Miss Davis at the wedding Farrar was supported by both English and Americans were many.

The wedding took place on July 6. Richard Harding Davis gave his sister away in marriage. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Canon Edgar Sheppard, subdean of the Chapel Royal, assisted by the Rev. John Stafford Northcote, vicar of St. Andrew's.

Among the guests were American Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Mr. and J. Mrsohn Hays Hammond, Mrs. Rebecca Davis, mother of the bride; Anthony Hope Hawkins, the novelist who writes under the name of "Anthony Hope;" Dr. Louis Starr and Mrs. Starr, Anthony J. Drexel, Sir William and Lady Osler.

Back of this wedding was a pretty international romance, and back of that was a picturesque history in the life of Chaplain Farrar.

Frederick Percival Farrar is one of eight children of the late Canon Farrar, one of the leading English ecclesiastic. Canon Farrar was an intimate friend of the late George W. Childs, the American publisher and philanthropist. Mr. Childs had no children. He appealed to Canon Farrar to let him have one son out of the bounteous Farrar brood.

Married Philadelphia Girl.

Canon Farrar allowed Frederick Percival to go to the Childs home in Philadelphia. The youth was given the best education possible. Then Mr. Childs got him to work on his newspaper, the Philadelphia Ledger. In time young Farrar became secretary to the late T. Clarke Davis, managing editor of the Ledger and father of Richard Harding and Nora Davis.

Mr. Davis frequently took Farrar home, where he met Miss Elsie. The two became fast friends, but none suspected any tender attachment.

When Farrar was twenty-one his father asked him to return to England and study for the ministry. He did so, with such signal success that he was appointed a royal chaplain and rector of Sandringham a few years ago.

He never forgot Miss Nora Davis, the fair daughter of her whom he met in Philadelphia. Last Spring Farrar came to America. He renewed his acquaintance with Miss Davis and ardently won her heart. An engagement was announced on April last.

News of the engagement was received with great pleasure in the Philadelphia home. The story of his former life in America was revived. Preparations were made to extend cordial welcome to the bride-elect.

In mid-summer the Davis family came over here, including the mother, brother and the sister. Then came the wedding at St. Andrew's on July 6, with the distinction that teh favor of royalty, church and society could bestow.

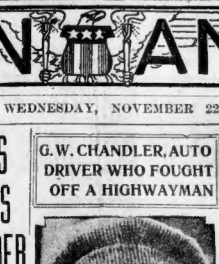
G.W. CHANDLER, AUTO DRIVER WHO FOUGHT OFF A HIGHWAYMAN



PLEADS GUILTY TO AUTO HOLDUP

Henry A. Heath of No. 62 Cliff street, Roxbury, who last night in Jamaica Plain attempted to hold up the automobile of Stephen B. Codman, a well-known architect, in which were Mr. Codman, his wife and a woman friend of Mrs. Codman, and was overpowered after a fight by Codman and his chauffeur, George W. Chandler, was arraigned before Judge Perris in the West Roxbury District Court to-day charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and with intent to rob. He pleaded guilty and was held in $3,000 for the Grand Jury.

Chauffeur Chandler, who received severe scalp wounds in the scuffle, was in court, his head covered with bandages, to press the charge against Heath. The story he related was as follows:

"I was driving Mr. Codman and his wife home from Dedham, where they had been visiting. When on Perkins street, near Prince street, Jamaica Plain, a man stepped in front of the auto and, flourishing a revolver, said: 'Money or your life!' I immediately applied the brakes and brought the machine to a stop.

"I climbed out of the machine and grappled with the man. He struck me with the butt end of the revolver on the head a number of times. Then Mr. Codman came to my assistance, and we overpowered the man with the help of a police officer who came to our aid."

Patrolman Cullen, who helped overpower Heath, declared that Heath had told him that he was desperate for want of money and went out with the intention of robbing the first person he met. He testified that the revolver was empty.

According to the police Heath was discharged from the navy November 15. He is twenty years old.

NEW AMBBASSADOR NAMED BY JAPAN

TOKIO, Japan, Nov. 22.—The transfer of Viscount Sutemi Chinda, the Japanese Ambassador at Berlin, to Washington was officially gazetted to-day. As Ambassador to the United States he succeeds Viscount Uchida, who has returned to Tokio as Minister of Foreign Affairs. Washington was notified of Chinda's tentative appointment a week ago, but the appointment was not officially made here until the American State Department had indicated that the selection was acceptable.

HERE'S BEST SNAKE STORY OF WINTER

EASTHAMPTON, Ct., Nov. 22.—Noticing a large snake enter a bank near the home of Milkman Ralph Sellew, by whom Chauncey Jones is employed, Jones dug into the virgin soil twenty feet, and three feet from the top found subway apartments from which twenty-seven black snakes were taken ranging in length from three and one-half to five and one-half feet. How they found their way down is a mystery. Last August seventeen black snakes were killed within 10 feet of this place.

220 BRITISH SUFFRAGETTES GO TO PRISON

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Although it had been expected that the cases would consume several days of the 220 Suffragettes who were arrested during last night's riot, were disposed of in rapid succession to-day, in each instance a prison sentence with alternative of a fine being imposed. All the women elected to go to jail and as a result the prison capacity of London will be overtaxed.

A heavy guard of policemen of such strength as is seldom seen except when political leaders charged with grave offence are on trial, was placed about Bow Street Police Court in anticipation of further riotis at the hearings of the Suffragettes charged with rioting and wantonly destroying government property.

The women haled into the court were among the last army of militant Suffragettes which attempted to storm the House of Parliament last night. It is estimated that fully $250,000 damage was done in the disorder throughout the Whitehall district.

When the women were turned back from Parliament Square by the force of 3,000 police they surged into the district populated by government officers and there followed scenes of anarchy.

Among the buildings which to-day showed ravages of the attack were the offices of the local government board, Liberal headquarters, the West End Strand Pentville, National Liberal Club, War Office, Home Office, Treasury Office, and the admiralty.

The offices of the newspapers, Daily Mail, Daily News and Morning Post, were also stacked and damaged. Hundreds of portrai windowsand shops are to-day without windows, evidence of the true aim of the stone throwers.

Fight Like Wild Animals.

Besides, who took advantage of the violence, engaged in many fights and stoned and other missiles and wrenching doors and shutters from their fastenings. Three men were placed under arrest with the women. Many of the women fought with the ferocity of wild animals when the police tried to arrest them.

Among the prisoners was Lady Constance Lytton, who has already served time for taking the peace in Liverpool and Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Another was Mrs. Patrick Lawrence, who led the charge upon Parliament, building after a mass meeting in Caxton Hall, where the government was reviled in fiery speeches.

The Hon. Mrs. Evelyn Haverfield was another prisoner, although she had spent the night at her residence, having been bailed out shortly after her arrest.

Among those who were given the police that the women would not fail to use violence if their way was barred, and the police cordon, which was lined up across the entrance to the square, the women made a rush and the police hurled the women back, but finally their rushes became so persistent and violent that the police began to make arrests. One young woman attired in a black velvet coat was conspicuous by her vigorous resistance of the efforts of Members of Parliament witnessing this fray.

Among those were Lord Winterton, John Ward and Mrs. Asquith's secretary, Reginald Nash.

DIVES 27 STORIES TO DEATH IN STREET

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—John J. Johnston, a building manager, committed suicide by diving from the twenty-seventh floor of the City Investment building at No. 165 Broadway. As Johnston's body plunged down a shaft opening on a three-story extension it passed the windows of scores of offices and was seen by hundreds of girls and men.

ELOPING BRIDE WHOSE HUSBAND IS FREED IN COURT

Mrs. Kenneth P. Hill, daughter of William A. Grunstein, milk dealer.

ELOPER HILL IS NOT GUILTY

Kenneth P. Hill, the twenty-year old Harvard student who eloped with Miss Ida Grunstein, a Radcliffe girl, last July was found not guilty by a jury in the Middlesex Superior Court to-day. Hill was charged with making a false statement under oath in procuring the wedding license. The charge against him was brought by Mr. Grunstein, the Cambridge milk contractor, and father of the girl.

When the jury had been impanelled, Arthur P. Stone, associate justice of the Cambridge police court, submitted a brief to Judge McLaughlin in which he stated that the Assistant City Clerk had no authority to administer an oath, and if that were true, Mr. Hill could not be found guilty.

Judge McLaughlin agreed with Mr. Stone and ordered the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty, which was done without their leaving the room.

Mr. Grunstein was in court during the arguments and was deeply interested. As soon as the verdict had been announced, he picked up his hat and hurriedly left the building.

Waiting in the corridor was Hill's bride. She paced back and forth and cast anxious glances through the court room door. When her husband came out and announced that he was not guilty, her face beamed with smiles as she said: "I knew you were not guilty and I knew you would be free." Arm in arm, the happy couple left the building and took a car on Cambridge street for Boston.

"EXPRESS TRUST" NOW UNDER FIRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—A sweeping investigation of the "express trust" resulting from complaints of more than 200 business interests throughout the United States was started in this city to-day by the Interstate Commerce Commission, Franklin K. Lane presiding. Hearings will be held in various cities. The chief complaints relate to rate schedules, relations to railroads and financial affairs. The commission is also acting through an organization known as the "Express Rate Conference." Among the members are D. O. Ives of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

A feature article of great interest to all textile workers will be printed in Sunday's AMERICAN.

JOHN D. TO FACE INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—John D. Rockefeller will have to appear before the Steel Investigating Committee and explain his high finance methods in the ore fields. This announcement was made by Chairman Stanley of the committee to-day as a result of sensational testimony given by Leonidas Merritt. Mr. Stanley also stated that the Rev. S. B. Gates, who, Merritt said, acted as agent for Rockefeller, will be summoned.

Further details of the high finance methods of Rockefeller in the ore fields were given before the investigation committee to-day.

Resuming the story of the alleged "framing" of the Merritt brothers, mulliers of the Duluth, Mesaba & Northern Railroad, by Rockefeller, Leonidas Merritt took the stand. He corroborated much of the testimony of his brother Orland, who preceded him, and who told how Rockefeller, by calling a loan of $420,000 on twenty-four hours' notice, had acquired control of property now estimated to be worth half a billion dollars.

Leonidas Merritt brushed the Rockefeller negotiations in New York, he said, while Alfred stayed on the Mesaba range. The committee voted to subpoena the oil king, but in executive session later decided not to issue a summons until the story of Leonidas Merritt had been heard.

Scores Henry C. Frick.

Treating his early years in financing his ore mines in Duluth, Mesaba & Northern railroad, Merritt said that he went to Andrew Carnegie after Carnegie had sent a man to get samples of the ore. He was sent then to H. C. Frick, who was in Carnegie's employ.

"Frick would not treat me like a gentleman," said Merritt. "He cut me off short and attempted to outdone me, so the negotiations were off."

Merritt testified that he and a number of his friends next got together and determined to finance the building of the road themselves. After a while, he said, he became acquainted with C. W. Wetmore of New York, who claimed to be an associate of John D. Rockefeller. After a short time Rockefeller's personal attorney, D. Willrod Murray, came out to Duluth to see the Merritt brothers and their friends, and about the same time Merritt said he discovered that some of the local stockholders of the road and ore mines were attempting to sell out to a rival company, the Minnesota Iron Company.

"My brother and I controlled a majority of the mining stock, and through friends controlled a majority of the railroad stock.

Was Advised to Sell.

"Senator Clapp was a stockholder and he called me on the telephone and since some of the stockholders were threatening to sell, my brother and I might sell first. If I had not been Rockefeller's agent I would have been better for my brother and myself."

Merritt explained that through Wetmore, they obtained $420,000 of Rockefeller stock, of which Rockefeller was to have a part. Wetmore and his associates were to buy bonds and furnish money for the extension of the road and the operation of the mines.

"About this time," continued the witness, "the Rev. S. B. Gates came up to Duluth, saying that he was a great friend of Rockefeller. Soon after Gates expired how plous he was and how pious John D. Rockefeller was.

"I trusted Gates and took his advice when he said that if my brother and I would put up a bundle of securities, instead of securities, notes and if we would consolidate our company with Rockefeller's properties we could get all the money we needed from John D."

Lawyer Is Excited.

A dramatic interchange between Chairman Stanley, Attorney Murray, representing Rockefeller, and the witness, Merritt, occurred when Merritt related how Rockefeller called in loans and pressed for securities worth millions for a loan of less than half a million. Merritt said he had been acting on the advice of the Rev. Dr. Gates and Attorney Murray.

"I have never been your attorney," interjected Murray. "That is an absolute falsehood."

"Weren't you an attorney for the Consolidated Iron Company after we consolidated our properties?" hesitatedly demanded Merritt.

Attorney Murray admitted that he was.

COL. SOHIER ON AUTO ACCIDENTS

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 22.—Colonel William D. Sohier, member of the Massachusetts Highway Commission, was one of the principal speakers at to-day's session of the road congress, being held here under the auspices of the American Association for Highway Improvement and affiliated organizations. This was Good Users' Day, in many respects the most important of the convention, and the speakers included prominent representatives of all classes of those who constantly employ the public highways in travelling for pleasure or in business.

Colonel Sohier's topic was "Automobile Regulation in Massachusetts," and as Massachusetts was a pioneer State in this work, the address was listened to with much interest. Colonel Sohier said:

"The Massachusetts Highway Commission made a traffic census of the vehicles using State highways. The private vehicles were actually counted at 240 stations during our State highway, scattered throughout the State for fourteen hours a day, seven days in August and seven days in October. The actual count showed that on some of the roads the motor vehicles, even at that time constituted 90 per cent of the traffic and in several instances over 1,100 cars a day passed a given point.

"A census was taken at certain places in the highways near Boston and this census showed over 90 per cent automobile travel and over 3,000 automobiles a day. Seven at that time, therefore, on many of our highways, especially on the main routes, it was found that the motor vehicle constituted more than one-half of the travel.

Cause of Accidents.

"I thought it would be of interest to ascertain as accurately as possible the cause of the various accidents which occur in our streets and highways, because many of them were due to traffic, how many to other causes, and of those due to traffic what proportion were due to the motor vehicle and what proportion were caused by other classes of vehicles using our highways. At my request there were the following figures were collected and collated from official reports by Mr. George McClure Sargent, secretary of the Massachusetts Automobile Association of Massachusetts:

"Automobile accidents throughout the country are receiving a no inconsiderable share of notoriety. They are given scare headlines in the papers, partly because this is a new means of locomotion and partly because of the prominence of the people engaging the automobiles. I think this matter will be of some interest to you. Please remember that of all the automobile accidents which we are able to hear of and report, 966 of the total of 1,182 accidents in 1910 occurred in city streets. In other words, four accidents occurred in city streets to every one that occurred in the country.

Mishaps in City.

"The figures submitted by Mr. Sargent were taken from the reports of the Police Commissioner of the city of Boston and of the Railroad Commissioners of the State of Massachusetts. As the reporting period we do not exactly correspond, I have made them as nearly as possible cover the same period of time as is covered by the report of our Commissioners.

"During the year ending November 30, 1910, according to the report of the Police Commissioner, the following number of people were killed and injured in the streets, parks and squares of Boston:

Total number of people killed	24
Total number of people injured	2023
Due to Traffic:
Deaths	59
Injuries	1,947

"In other words, only about half the deaths and only half of the injuries were due to traffic. Very few of these disasters were due to horse-drawn vehicles and trains, so these figures are omitted.

Deaths and injuries due to Traffic:
Total number deaths	59
Due to horse-drawn vehicles	22, or 44
Due to trolley cars	22, or 44
Due to automobiles	15, or 30
Total number injuries	1,022
Due to trolley cars	360, or 35%
Due to horse-drawn vehicles	360, or 35%
Due to automobiles	302, or 29%

The first bowled over a challenge to F. A. Brodie, a real estate man, who on being examination, stated one of his attorneys was former Judge Gray, now employed by the State to give legal points. Without stating the grounds Judge Bordwell overruled the challenge without prejudice to interposing any other challenges.

The court then passed on the challenges to S. P. Olcott and A. J. Stevens, interposed by the defense yesterday and taken under advisement. Both were overruled, the court but stating any particular grounds for his action.

Olcott and Stevens had not been examined by the State.

but that he did not regard himself in any way in the employ of Merritt, one of the principal stockholders.

"It makes no difference about that," said Chairman Stanley, "I will not have witnesses insulted here by attorneys. I warn Mr. Murray that he had better not repeat the offence."

Merritt told a pathetic story of how his millions had been wiped away over night by Rockefeller.

To Crush Stockholders.

"Gates told me," Merritt said, "that Rockefeller had arranged with the other stockholders to throw us out of the company, but that if we would deal with him (Rockefeller) he would protect us and crush the other stockholders.

"I could scarcely believe my ears when I heard this from the minister, Rockefeller's representative," continued Merritt. "I told him that this would be a startling out in my country and that a man would go to jail for it. Gates replied that Rockefeller with his $200—$300—$700,000,000 —unbounded influence could do what he would and stand behind me. I said to the Rev. Dr. Gates: 'Go back to J. D. Rockefeller and tell him when I steal I will steal for myself.'"

A few hours later the witness said he was notified that his loan would be foreclosed in twenty-four hours.

When Merritt had concluded his testimony Chairman Stanley announced that Rockefeller and the Rev. Dr. Gates would be subpoenaed to appear before the committee. Rockefeller's counsel was unable to inform the committee of the oil king's whereabouts.

NEW MYSTERY IS FOUND IN DURLAND'S SUICIDE

MRS. KELLOG DURLAND

Widow of the noted writer, who is believed to have been with him when he swallowed cyanide of potassium.

Effort is being made to-day to solve the mystery surrounding the sensational suicide of H. Kellogg Durland of New York, formerly of Boston, the Harvard graduate, Socialist and writer, who ended his life in this city with cyanide of potassium. Grief over his marital troubles has been advanced as the most probable theory. Durland's wife, Genevieve Greyville Durland, began action for divorce in New York two weeks ago.

It was in front of a woman, said to be Mrs. Durland, that Durland swallowed the fatal dose of cyanide. This was at the South Station Saturday night. He was rushed to the Relief Hospital, where he died Sunday morning. The case was entered, through some error, under the name of "Kellogg Kurkind" on the hospital books.

The identity of the brilliant writer was discovered when Medical Examiner Magrath recognized the body as he started to perform an autopsy yesterday at North Grove, near Morgue. After the autopsy, for which a finding of suicide was returned by Dr. Magrath, the body was taken to Forest Hills Cemetery, where it was committed to a receiving tomb.

Took Poison in Station.

Durland took the poison shortly before midnight, Saturday at the South Station. He was with a woman supposed to be his wife, Genevieve Greyville Durland, the writer, who recently served divorce papers upon him. She accused Durland of being "a rover."

It is supposed that grief over his marital difficulties drove Durland to this spectacular self-destruction before the wife who had prepared to leave him.

On the other hand, when the Durland divorce was first reported from New York on November 7, Mrs. Durland was said to have gone to Europe.

The reason for Mr. Durland's real name remaining so long unknown is the mistakes entry on the Relief Hospital books at the time the man was brought there dying Saturday midnight. Lagrange street police station, whose ambulance was used for the hurry call, transmitted the name as "Kellogg Kurkind." The police obtained this name from the woman who was with Durland when he swallowed the poison.

Found Violently Ill.

Though much remains to be cleared up about the case, the facts so far known are as follows:

At 11:40 Saturday night a call was sent from the South Station to Lagrange street police station for a man who had been taken ill at the station. In the waiting room at the station a man was found violently ill. A woman, said to be the man's wife, was there. She said they had come there for her to board the midnight train for New York.

"My husband put something in his mouth," said the woman, "and called for a glass of water. Before he got the water he was terribly ill."

The man was rushed to the Relief Hospital, but was nearly dead when he arrived. He passed away soon after midnight.

It was suspected that the man had taken poison. Medical Examiner Magrath was notified. Meanwhile the man had been entered on the hospital records as "Kellogg Kurkind." Probably that was the way the ambulance patrolman got the name from the woman. At any rate, this name completely covered up the identity of the man till Dr. Magrath recognized the body when he went to North Grove street morgue to perform the autopsy.

Surprise for Examiner.

Dr. Magrath was astounded to discover, in the body of the subject, the brilliant journalist and Socialist who had often interviewed him in previous years.

After the autopsy Dr. Magrath pronounced the case one of suicide. It was said by the police that letters were found on the man indicating that he had planned this step.

A little while after the autopsy the body was removed to Forest Hills cemetery and was committed to a receiving tomb. There was much mystery as to who was assuming charge of the body. The woman who was with Durland at the South Station Saturday night accompanied the ambulance to the Relief Hospital. But where she is now is not known.

The suicide of Kellogg Durland ends an unusual career.

Durland was the son of J. H. and Eunice Lavinia Coe Durland, and was born in this city thirty years ago. He was educated at Harvard (1900), the University of Edinburgh (1901), and L'Ecole des Hautes Etudes Sociales in Paris (1902). He worked as a coal miner in Nova Scotia during four months of 1901 "to study mining conditions," and made a special investigation into child labor abuses in the Pennsylvania coal mines in 1902. He was head of the Tech House in Boston, 1903-4, and head worker in the University Settlement here in 1904-5.

As a disguised immigrant he studied the American immigration question in 1905, and traveled in Russia during the revolution of 1906. He has contributed magazine articles to Collier's, Harper's Weekly and the Review of Reviews. While traveling in Russia he was arrested and imprisoned.

W. J. BRYAN ON STRANDED SHIP

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 22.—A wireless to Charles W. Bryan, received this forenoon from his brother, William J. Bryan, coming via Key West, says:

"Vessel grounded mile from shore. Don't worry; no danger."

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—A stray wireless message, picked up by the operator at the Fire Island station early to-day reported that the Hamburg-American liner Prinz Joachim had gone ashore on Samana Island, 170 miles north of Cuba.

The Prinz Joachim sailed from this port last Saturday bound for Kingston, Jamaica, Santiago, Colon and other ports. Among the names on her list were those of William Jennings Bryan, Mrs. Bryan and their six-year-old grandson, John Bryan.

Among the passengers on the Joachim are E. C. Adams, Ernest Bradford, C. M. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Burke, J. M. Collins, E. A. Carsaff of Newark, N. J.; W. B. Coby of Content City, Mich.; H. M. Dombleday of Lyons, N. Y.; C. L. Elliott and wife of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Jest, Marie Guhlock, Dr. Eugene Gonczi of Chicago, Dr. W. E. Ingraller, Mr. and Mrs. E. Jaramillo, Mr. and Mrs. M. Simonitis of Syracuse, N. Y.; Miss Kathleen Mayer of Syracuse, N. Y.; W. Sauns of Boston.

Another wireless received at 6:30 o'clock stated that the sea was calm and that there was no panic among the passengers.

LIFE CREWS OFF TO AID VESSELS ON SOUTH COAST

CHATHAM, Nov. 22.—Two schooners flying signals of distress were sighted some distance offshore early to-day. One, a two-masted schooner, is lying at anchor well out to sea between the Pollock Rip slue and the Pollock Rip lightship. The Chatham life-saving crew, headed by Captain Herbert Eldridge, and the Monomoy crew, under Captain Frank Hamilton, have gone to her assistance.

The other vessel is a three-masted schooner, the name of which cannot be made out. Distress signals are set and she is limping towards shore, apparently trying to make Orleans. Several of the crew have been seen in the rigging. High sea kicked up by the gale is still running and it is thought that unless assistance reaches the vessel soon she may go down with all on board.

A volunteer life-saving crew was formed to go to the aid of the stricken three-master, which was not sighted until after both the Chatham and Monomoy life-saving crews had started for the distressed vessel's master. The three-master is still a long distance out to sea.

BIG STORM HITS LINERS BOUND FOR BOSTON HARBOR

Vessels arriving in port to-day told of passing through one of the stormiest nights ever encountered along the Massachusetts coast.

A sixty-mile gale from the northwest and a high choppy sea, running from the southeast against the west, caused one of the most peculiar seas that mariners have ever witnessed.

It brought the big White Star liner Romanic to port with her smokestack, a hundred feet above the sea, covered with a thick coating of salt. Her wireless apparatus was hanging in a mass of strands.

The little American schooner Woodward Abrahams, Captain Gray, from Cheverie, N. S., arrived with her head sails blown away. She sailed into port under reefed foresails and mainsails. Captain Gray and a crew of four men worked all night to keep the craft afloat.

Officers of the Hamburg-American liner Bosnia reported that the ship, a 1,500-ton freighter, plowed and tossed all night like a chip upon a mill pond.

A Marvelous Recovery
Milton, Mass., Man Permanently Cured of Terrible Kidney Trouble

C. H. Foster, 180 Thacher St., Milton, Mass., says: "I ran down so rapidly that I became thin and pale as death. A urinary trouble annoyed me constantly. I had sharp, shooting pains in various parts of my body and I grew tired and languid. I had the kidney secretions examined by a physician, who said I was in bad shape and advised a change of climate. At that time the urine was very dark and unnatural. I used half a dozen boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The backache left, appetite improved, weight picked up 20 pounds and I felt well and strong. The trouble never returned."

Remember the name—Doan's.

Q—You say you considered hereditary conditions? A.—Yes.

Q—What were they? A.—The mental troubles of Spencer's father and grandfather and other relations.

Q—Would it make much difference in making up your decision whether an ancestor of Spencer's died violently insane at sixty years, or died of softening of the brain when over eighty. A.—It would not make much difference.

Q—How do these deaths affect this young man of thirty. A.—They show a tendency in that family to suffer from nervous diseases.

Q—Did you consider that if the old gentleman Spencer died at seventy-nine instead of eighty or over that his insanity could not have been brought into this case. A.—I gave it some consideration.

Q—Isn't it a fact that at eighty senile dementia comes to many as a result of old age? A.—Yes.

Declares Spencer Is Insane.

Q—Did you attach any importance to the fact that one of Spencer's ancestors died of senile dementia and lived to be ninety-three? A.—I did.

Q—Then, with these considerations you reached the conclusion that Spencer was insane? A.—Yes; he was and is insane.

Dr. Joseph W. Courtney of Boston was called to the stand as an expert on insanity for the defence. He was examined by Lawyer Stapleton:

Q—Did you examine Spencer? A.—Yes, three times—in August of last year and in August and September of this year.

Q—What is your opinion of the mental condition of Spencer? A.—He was insane when he shot Miss Blackstone and he is insane now.

Attorney-General Swift started to ask the witness if he considered a man insane when he went armed into a house and pulled down the blinds, when he was interrupted by Spencer, who, addressing the Judge, said:

Interruption by Spencer.

"Say, Judge, I want to tell you something. The shades he shows were never drawn the evening I went there. The shades were never up in any house I visited. When I went into the Dow house I could not see any one. Don't let this thing get away with this lie. It is simply another of his."

"Sit down—keep quiet," cozied Turnkey Wade.

"I'll not. I'm not going to let that man get away with his lies."

Q—Do you use the terms mental deficiency and insanity as synonymous? A.—No. Insanity is the broader of the two; mental deficiency may lead to insanity.

Q—When you say that the prisoner is insane do you speak in the broad sense? A.—I certainly do. Spencer is insane.

Q—Can you tell us what insanity is? A.—No, and I do not believe that any one else can.

Spencer sat back on his hard bench, and was the Spencer of the first few days of the trial, every fibre in his body quivering, every muscle twitching, and his eyes staring vacantly ahead or cast towards the floor.

"Insane at Time of Crime."

"He was insane at the time of the murder of Miss Blackstone," declared Dr. Lane, "and he is insane now. He was unable to refrain from committing the crime with which he is charged. He did not understand the nature and quality of the act."

Dr. Deluge followed Dr. Courtenay. Dr. Briggs qualified as an alienist, having for ten years or less been connected with the medical department of the Boston Insanitary, that he has been an alienist for the Children's Aid Society and for the State Board of Charity in examining defective children, and that he had charge of Dr. Jennings' Sanitarium for a year. He testified that he was a member of the American Medical Society and had written books and papers on nervous and mental diseases. He was questioned by Attorney Stapleton.

Q—Did you make an examination of the prisoner, Bertram G. Spencer? A.—I did.

Q—And how many times? A.—I made three examinations.

Q—And were these examinations similar to those testified to by physicians who preceded you? A.—They were.

Q—Now taking into consideration the heredity of the defendant, his physical and mental development, his environment, training and education, the various delinquencies to which he has confessed and which are in evidence, the various outbreaks of rage as testified to, and his consequent conduct and your own observation, have you come to any conclusion as to the mental responsibility of the prisoner? A.—I have.

"Has Been and Is Insane."

Q—What is that conclusion? A.—That the prisoner has been and is controlled by an irresistible impulse, that he has been and is insane.

Q—Did your reference to the crime with which he is charged, do you believe that he appreciated the character and nature of his act? A.—I do not.

Q—Do you believe that he could distinguish right from wrong? A.—He could not.

Q—And at the time of the crime what was his condition? A.—He was dominated by an irresistible impulse at the time of the crime.

He was then cross-examined by Attorney-General Swift.

Q—Doctor, what is an irresistible impulse? A.—I can best answer by an illustration. If I came to your office and saw on his desk, he will take every means to get it. He should not get it. He should not take it. And he knows that he should not take it away, and yet he will go and get it. That's irresistible impulse.

Q—And the same thing would apply to a confirmed drunkard. If he sees the drink upon the bar, wouldn't it? A.—Yes. The condition would be similar.

Three Examinations.

Q.—Now, Doctor, how many times did you examine the prisoner? A.—Three times.

Q—And was one of the times at Bridgewater? A.—The third one.

Q—Did you go to Bridgewater with an open mind? A.—I did.

Q—How did you come to examine Spencer? A.—Because his mother asked me.

Q—Didn't you go down to Bridgewater to investigate conditions there? A.—No, I did not.

Q—State just how you happened to go to Bridgewater. A.—Spencer had written a letter complaining of conditions there. Dr. Elliot had written a letter to Spencer's mother, saying that Spencer had delusions. Mrs. Spencer asked me to go there and ascertain the exact facts as to whether or not her son had delusions and just what his condition was. Anyhow, I went to Bridgewater.

Q—Now what tests did you make? A.—I made the knee test, the eye test and the general tests disclosing insanity.

Q—And you talked considerably with Spencer? A.—Yes.

Q—And then from what he told you, were you influenced at all in coming to the conclusion which you have? A.—Yes.

Q—Tell us some incidents related to you by Spencer that led you to your conclusion that he was suffering from an irresistible impulse.

A.—He told me the story of his crime. That he went to the house and rang Miss Blackstone. He said that the devil had him, although at the time he was good and gentle, but when the devil got in his brain he was a criminal and a thief. The devil made him go to the night clothes to fight off the influence. He simply had to go. Twice while in the bushes he had to leave to the middle of the plays to visit houses to commit burglary. Often when in bed the impulse would come over him and he would leave his sleeping wife, go out and roll and return to find his wife still asleep. He never went to a house but once unless he found a window open.

"Insane Are Cunning."

Q—Didn't that strike you as a safe method of burglarizing, in the conclusion of a sane man. A.—Well, it was a cunning method and insane men are cunning.

Q—What other stories did he tell you? A.—Once when the devil tempted him he said he walked three miles trying to fight off the impulse to steal. He saw a nut on a door step, took it and brought it home, satisfied that he had stolen something. At another time he took a heavy railroad brake shoe and it is in his yard now. He fought off the impulse to burglarize a residence and had satisfied his desire to steal by carrying off the brake.

Q—Anything else? A.—He told me he lived to take jewelry and silverware, but he was satisfied with pins. He would take anything, although bright things attracted his attention.

Q—This information made you come to the conclusion that Spencer was irresponsible and was swayed by an irresistible impulse. A.—Yes.

Q—Do you think it was an irresistible impulse that prompted him to stop robbing houses for six months, after he had lost a pocket locket in an attempt to rob one house and when he feared that it would result in his arrest? A.—Well, it was to let matter the sway or an irresistible impulse of the time.

Q—Yet you know for six months he refrained from committing robbery? A.—Yes.

"Violent Desire."

Q—He didn't open his career of robbery until as he says himself he was sure the police hadn't found the locket containing the picture of his mother and sister. You know that? A.—Yes.

Q—And yet with that in mind, you think he was controlled by an irresistible impulse. A.—Yes—a great up desire often becomes violent, and it did in this case.

Q—You have your mind firmly made up and it can't be changed, can it? A.—I have my mind made up and I believe honestly. It is made up of facts and my observations.

Subsequent examination by Attorney Stapleton.

Q—Did you have some talk with Dr. Elliott regarding Spencer's mental condition? A.—Yes.

Q—What did Dr. Elliott say? A.—He said, I consider Spencer a high-grade imbecile. He has delusions and the charges he makes in his letters prove it.

Mr. Attorney-General Swift:

Q—Do you know that you contradict Dr. Elliott? A.—I don't know. I am testifying to the truth.

At this point the defence rested its case. Twelve witnesses were sworn in by the

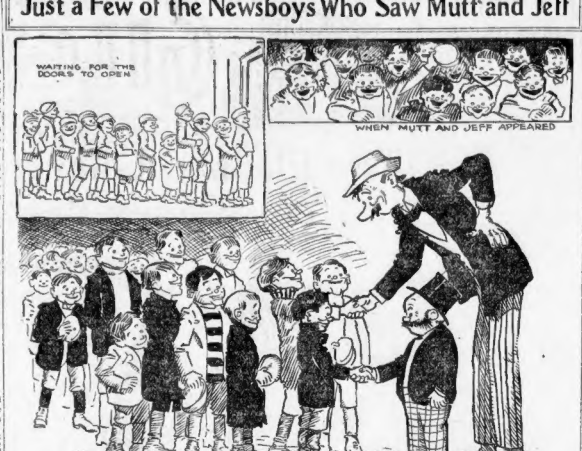
Just a Few of the Newsboys Who Saw Mutt and Jeff



WAITING FOR THE DOORS TO OPEN
WHEN MUTT AND JEFF APPEARED
ROGER GRAY AS "MUTT" AND SHORTY DE WITT AS "LITTLE JEFF" RECEIVING THE NEWSBOYS

A big party of newsboys greeted the performance of "Mutt and Jeff" and afterward Mutt and Jeff gave just as hearty a greeting to the boys, as they filed onto the stage.

NEWSBOYS SEE MUTT AND JEFF

It was not an Indian outbreak, nor a delegation from a "dippy" home.

Bud Fisher's pioneer theatrical production, that sizzling, rapid-fire, three-act musical comedy entitled "Mutt and Jeff," was merely undergoing one of the severest tests in its brief but popular career.

It was being passed upon by the most critical of all dramatical critics, the kind who render their verdicts clad in jerseys, jumpers and sweaters, but who are the most human judges after all—200 of the city's newsboys who were the guests of the AMERICAN at the Globe Theatre last night.

Every person who ever trod the boards knows that the "gallery gods" are the hardest to please and the most prompt to detect and applaud merit and ability.

The reason? Simple enough! They're not hampered by gold-mined gozzles or starched shirts. They don't have to labor coining pretty phrases. They just express right there and then in good, old-fashioned slang their opinion of the hat and it goes. Loud and long, or soft and low, as the case may be, but always with a unanimity that is unmistakable.

The boys came in droves, by the hundreds, by the thousands, and the more they came the more they laughed and the more they laughed the more they came.

Mirth Pervades Theatre.

They came early and were there until the final drop. It was an orderly, good-natured audience, a half dozen of keen, healthy faces with teeth that showed in frequent grins and eyes that flashed merriment. A dozen of the city's future citizens and business and professional men grouped about where they felt at home.

"Happy," the king of the local newsboys, had the theatre party in tow. There were no "caught kisses" ladies. But there was no censure on outbursts. When the long and short individuals popped from the wings they were showered with applause. It was as if they had "hopped out of an American extry," according to Pug Pinto, and Skinny felt just a bit disappointed because "Bud didn't show up for a speech."

With alternating handclapping and side-splitting laughter the "newsboys and everyone else present followed the antics of the droll Jeff and the awkward but scheming Mutt from the Saratoga race track to the stirring revolution in South America, when Jeff appears leading a cannon bigger than himself and Mutt proudly wields a cork-screw.

Tubber Beans Verdict.

Their adventures aboard ship, the duel and the shoot-the chute companionway, Mutt's love entanglements, the puns and philosophies of Jeff, their grotesque makeups, their dogging of cannon-balls and their occupancy of the castle must be seen to be enjoyed.

"A dipple," ejaculated Tubber Bean. "Mutt and Jeff" got it on Bill Shakespeare.

A Reasonable Plea For the Stomach

If Your Stomach Is Lacking in Digestive Power, Why Not Help the Stomach Do Its Work—Especially When It Costs Nothing to Try?

Not with drugs, but with a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach? Scientific analysis shows that digestion requires pepsin, nitrogenous ferments, and the secretion of hydrochloric acid. When your food fails to digest, it is proof positive that some of these agents are lacking in your digestive apparatus.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain nothing but these natural elements necessary to digestion and when placed at work in the weak stomach and small intestines, supply what these organs need. They stimulate the gastric glands and gradually bring the digestive organs back to their normal condition.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been subjected to critical chemical tests at home and abroad and are found to contain nothing but natural digestives.

I have analyzed most carefully a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets (which I bought myself at a city chemist's shop for the purpose), manufactured by the F. A. Stuart Co., 86 Clerkenwell Road, London, E. C., and have to report that I cannot find any trace of vegetable or mineral poisons. Knowing the ingredients of the tablets I am of opinion that they are admirably adaptable for the purpose for which they are intended.

John R. Brooke, F. I. C., F. C. S.

There is no secret in the preparation of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Their composition is commonly known among physicians, as is shown by the recommendations of 40,000 licensed physicians in the United States and Canada. They are the most popular of all remedies for indigestion, dyspepsia, water brash, insomnia, loss of appetite, melancholia, constipation, dysentery and kindred diseases originating from improper dissolution and assimilation of foods, because they are the most thoroughly reliable and harmless to man or child.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are at once a safe and a powerful remedy, one grain of these tablets being strong enough (by test) to digest 3,000 grains of steak, eggs and other foods. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest your food for you when your stomach can't.

Ask your druggist for a fifty cent box or send to us direct for a free trial sample package and you will be surprised at the result. F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall Mich.

WHAT IS YOUR RECIPE FOR BEST BROWN BREAD?

Of course, you can bake brown bread. But what Mrs. Delmar from the "Show Me" State wants to find out, and what thousands of American readers wish to know since she asked the question, is how?

Results count, and for that reason you, Mrs. Hustling Housewife of New England, have been making the kind that mother used to bake ever since you first learned how to cook. Kindly give your recipe for that luscious brown bread, for the benefit of the Missouri housewife and the others that want to learn how you cook your loaves.

Maybe you have the winner. Who can tell? You never can tell until you have tried the recipes the other housewives use, and that's one reason the Boston AMERICAN is printing these recipes from day to day. Perhaps you've thought, like so many others, you made the paragon of brown bread perfection. Now, let's see.

Plentiful and Varied.

The AMERICAN started its brown bread contest after Mrs. Delmar of St. Louis came to Boston and discovered that brown bread recipes were plentiful and varied in makeup. Practically everybody agreed on the baking of beans. Then Mrs. Delmar appealed to the AMERICAN to help her get the recipe for making real New England brown bread.

To bring this about, the AMERICAN has offered $10 in prizes. The winners are to be determined by impartial judges.

For the best recipe the prize will be $5. For the next five best recipes the AMERICAN gives $1 each.

Send your recipes along. Send them to the Brown Bread Editor, Boston AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass. And do it RIGHT NOW.

Here are some of the thousands of recipes received up to date:

How Some Women Make It.

One tablespoon of shorting butter and lard, mix; ½ cup sugar, 2 eggs, 1 cup sour milk with 1 teaspoon soda mixed in milk, 1 cup molasses, 1 cup graham flour, 1 cup wheat flour, ½ cup cornmeal, fine meal; 1 teaspoon salt. Bake about one hour.

MRS. J. WALSH.

No. 310 Prospect street, Cambridge.

Two and one-third cups graham flour, 2 1-3 cups rye meal, 2 1-3 cups corn meal, 1½ teaspoons soda, 1½ teaspoon salt, 1½ cups molasses, 1¼ cups sour milk, 1 cup raisins. Thoroughly mix and sift the first five; mix molasses and sour milk and add to the first mixture; add raisins and stir well. Butter the insides of 1¼-pound baking powder tins, fill them half full of the mixture, cover tightly, place in a kettle of boiling water and steam one hour. Be sure and keep the kettle tightly covered and the water boiling the entire time. For a pudding sauce take 1 cup granulated sugar, 1½ cups butter, 1½ cups cream juice, 1 cup cups boiling water; cream the butter and sugar, add cream juice and cream again, and boiling water gradually; mix well and serve at once. If liked rare, omit cream and roughly creamed this sauce is very foamy.

No. 955 Mass. avenue, Roxbury.

Two and one-half cups corn meal, 1 cup corn starch, ½ cup wheat flour, ½ cup rye meal; dron 1½ teaspoon soda into the wheat flour; sift rye meal, corn meal and corn starch and wheat flour, add 1 cup a teaspoon salt and wheat flour, add 1 cup a teaspoon salt and wheat flour, add 1 cup syrup; stir in gradually 2½ cups sour milk; mix well and steam four hours.

MRS. A. KELLY.

No. 955 Massachusetts avenue, Roxbury.

One full cup of graham flour, three-fourths of a cup of white flour, then fill the cup up with graham flour; one-half cup of corn meal, then fill the cup with graham flour again; one-half teaspoonful salt, one-half teaspoonful soda, one cup of molasses, one cup of sour milk. Beat well. Steam three hours.

MRS. C. S. JOHNSTON.

No. 10 Hillside park, Somerville.

One cup of sweet milk, 2 cups of sour milk, ½ cup of molasses, 1 teaspoon saleratus beaten into the molasses, 1 cup of bread flour, 1 heaped cup of corn meal, ½ teaspoon of salt, 1 scant cup of rye meal unsifted, 1 tablespoon melted butter. Beat until well blended and pour into a well 1 heaping teaspoon of soda; beat together thoroughly and steam five hours.

MRS. J. N. BROOKS.

No. 260 South Union street, South Lawrence.

Here is an old, true and tried recipe for brown bread, used for many years by Cape Cod families: One cup Indian meal, 1 cup rye meal, 1 cup pastry flour, 1 cup molasses, 1 teaspoon saleratus, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 cup hot water. Pour into tight covered can, put the lids a larger pail with tight cover, one-quarter filled with boiling water, and set in oven for five hours. This needs no attention and is ready when the beans are.

MRS. G. C. GARDINER.

No. 82 Waverly street, Everett.

One cup sifted corn meal, 1¾ pints boiling water, one cup sifted wheat flour, ½ yeast cake, ½ cup sifted rye flour, ½ cup molasses, one cup graham flour, two tablespoons melted butter, ½ cup stoned raisins, pinch salt. Take one pint boiling water, pour over corn meal and salt; let scald a few minutes, add molasses, graham, rye and wheat flours, one cup cold water; add floured raisins, melted butter. Add the yeast last, dissolved in the remaining half cup lukewarm water. Beat thoroughly, fill all a well greased lard pail with cover, set the bread in warm place for two hours until it rises within an inch of the top. Grease again on top fin and cover. Bake 4½ hours in moderate oven. I use a five-pound lard pail.

COMPARES LIFE TO GAME OF CHESS

"Life is as a game of chess," was the comparison made by Rev. Father Bernard Vaughan, S. J., in his address to the students of Boston College and High School in the college hall. He was introduced by Rev. Fr. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of the college. In his address Fr. Vaughan said:

"Life can better be compared to a game of chess. It does not matter whether you are the king, queen, knight or bishop. It is not of supreme import what your character in the game is, for when the game is over all the characters are swept off the board and covered in a little box and placed away. Play your game on your own little square on the board and you shall have done your part."

AUTOIST CHARGED WITH INTOXICATION

Roy H. Warren of No. 429 Washington street, Newton, was held in $1,000 for a hearing November 29 by Judge Williams in the Roxbury District Court to-day on the charge of operating an automobile while intoxicated. While guiding his machine along Tremont street last night he struck and knocked down Harry Cannon, sixty years old, of No. 1,297 Tremont street, Roxbury. Cannon is in the City Hospital suffering from numerous bruises.

BEATTIE MAKES READY FOR END

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 22.—With only two days and a freedom to live, Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., the rich youth convicted of wife murder, to-day began his final preparations for the end. He did not take a will, because he had no property to dispose of, having lived on his father.

But he had a few personal belongings and these he gave to prison guards who have been kind to him since he has been in the death cell. To one he gave a raincoat. To another an overcoat. A third received from him a seal ring and a fourth got a silk-covered cigarette case. It is said Beattie remarked that he hoped each would live to enjoy his little gifts for many years.

The condemned man spent an hour writing a letter to his chum, "Billy" Sampson, who, at his trial testified, "Henry and I hit a pretty fast pace around this country."

"The Wages of Sin."

The letter, of course, was read by the prison officials before it was sent out. It is said the maiden-like-advised young Sampson to contemplate his friend's position; that as to the gay life both had led there was nothing in it, and that while making no admission of murder Henry wrote in effect "The wages of sin is death,' as the Bible tells us."

It is regarded as significant and perhaps as a slope of absolute guilt that young Beattie never once, since he has been in prison here from the time of his conviction early last September, has asked to see his baby, Henry Clay Beattie, III, the infant son of the young wife he killed on the Midlothian turnpike in July.

His brother, Douglas Beattie, to-day received permission to represent the Beattie family in the penitentiary at the time of the execution. He will be granted charge of the body as soon as Beattie is pronounced dead by Doctor Oppenheimer, representing the State.

Beattie is said to be entirely reconciled to the fact that he is to die, although to a reporter he said:

"There are lots of worse people in the world than I am. Why should I have to go when I am so young?"

Execution Friday.

Day by day the officials of Virginia are endeavoring more earnestly—according to their State law—to keep the details of the condemned man's action and condition from becoming public. Not a single fact—except the bare announcement of his death—are be printed here after his life is taken, although, of course, other States may print anything that can by learned.

Governor Mann yesterday afternoon made his final statement on the question of a possible reprieve for Beattie, which wrote:

"I have said the last word I am going to say in this case. The prisoner will be executed at the appointed time on Friday. There will be no farther extension."

AGED WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH IN FIRE

DENNIS, Nov. 22.—Mrs. Mary A. Hall, eighty-seven, widow of Nathan Hall, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed her home on Hotel road. "Aunt Mary Ann," as Mrs. Hall was familiarly known, lived alone. It is thought she was broiling a steak when the kitchen took fire. The smoke and flames were pouring out of the kitchen door when seen by Orin H. Shiverick. With several other men he hurried to the scene. They were obliged to enter the front of the house and were unable to find Mrs. Hall or to save the dwelling. Afterward the charred body was found among the embers.

BOY'S HEAD SHOT OFF WHEN GUNNER FALLS

NASHUA, N. H., Nov. 22.—Frank Bassett, a four-year-old boy, had his head blown off while on a hunting trip in Hudson, when his companion, Almon Martin, seventeen years old, slipped and fell. Martin's gun became caught in the brush and when he went over it exploded. Bassett, who was only three feet in front, received the full charge of buckshot in the back of the head.

VENEZUELAN BATTLE WON BY GEN. CASTRO

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 22.—A dispatch to the Nuevo Era from Caracas says that Cipriano Castro, ex-President of Venezuela, has won a battle in Venezuela. Castro, it is said, entered his native country with some thousands of followers.

ANDREW CARNEGIE VISITS PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Andrew Carnegie held a long conference with President Taft this afternoon. It was reported that Carnegie's visit had to do with the government suit against the Steel Trust.

ENDS MISERY FROM INDIGESTION OR A SICK, SOUR, GASSY STOMACH

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapepsin.

If your Stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a reenforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak Stomachs should take a little Diapepsin occasionally, and there will be no more Indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no Heartburn, Sour risings, Gas on Stomach or Belching of undigested food, Headaches, Dizziness or Sick Stomach, and, besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved five minutes after taking a little Diapepsin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

FOURTH BREAK IN FITZ'S HOME

With the police guard watching from the garage and with members of the family in the house, a fourth attempt has been made on a fourth consecutive night to rob the home of ex-Judge Frank E. Fitz, at Lakeside, Wakefield.

The last attempt was particularly audacious because it was well known that Chief Pollard of the Wakefield police had detailed a man to guard the Fitz premises from dusk till dawn.

In spite of extra precaution to protect the premises, Judge Fitz found the doorplate on the back door removed and the lock fixed so that anyone could enter by that way without a key.

The Judge's discovery amazed Chief Pollard and his men, who cannot understand how the trick was accomplished. As per caution, however, against any repetition of the attempt during the night, extra men were detailed to assist in guarding the place.

Doorplate is Removed.

Last Saturday night Judge Fitz came home late and found a quantity of silver and other valuables piled up in a lower floor room, indicating that burglars were scared away just as they were ready to take out the loot. Judge Fitz reported this attempt and watch was kept the next night. The very same thing was attempted Sunday night.

Monday night the doorplate on the back door was removed. This was found out in the evening and this third attempt was frustrated.

Astounded at this boldness, Chief Pollard detailed Patrolman Joseph Ryan to go to the garage in the rear of the Fitz home at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and watch for intruders.

Pollard took up his watch. Members of the family were home. Judge Fitz arrived home from Boston at 6 o'clock. The family ate supper. After supper the Judge walked out through the back vestibule. He stepped on a piece of metal.

All Night Patrol.

He found this the same doorplate which had been removed from the back door Monday night and then put back in place after it was found. The lock had again been fixed for a burglar to enter without trouble.

Judge Fitz showed the doorplate to Patrolman Pollard.

"There hasn't been a soul around that door except myself and the members of your family since I've been on guard," said Pollard.

Members of the family said that the doorplate was intact up to supper time. How the doorplate could have been removed with the family in the house and Pollard on guard is a perplexing mystery to all concerned.

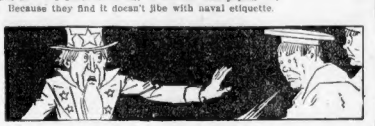
Chief Pollard called out the eight special officers who supplement the regular Wakefield force of patrolmen. The men patrolled the town all night, with particular attention to the Lakeside district and Judge Fitz's premises. No further trouble was reported.

GUM WISDOM.

By MORTON BIRGE.

The Washington authorities, those bureaucrats so hard,
Are drawing torrid language from the Charlestown Navy Yard;
The very latest order which from Washington has come
Is that the U. S. "Jackie" must give up his chewing gum.

In olden times the "Jackie" was a lad of blood and rum,
In lieu of "grog" these later days he took to chewing gum.
But now the bureaucrats cut off his one best popsin bet,
Because they find it doesn't jibe with naval etiquette.



If they keep on there won't be much for "Jackie" left to do,
Except to play at "Three-of-cat" or simple "Tic-tac-too."
Those bureaucrats at Washington are bureaucrating some——
They've got the Navy problem solved; they've stopped the "Jackie's" gum.

RENAUD RECITAL CHARMS MANY

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Emiliano Renaud, the French Canadian pianist, appeared in recital before a large audience in Sichrest Hall yesterday afternoon. He played a long program from Schumann, Chopin and Liszt.

Mr. Renaud is a slim, poetic sort of young man who fits nicely into his seat at the piano. He is straightforward and earnest, with few mannerisms to detract from his performances. He depends for appreciation upon the music he makes, which is an attitude to be recommended to many piano virtuosi.

It is one thing to play Schumann, another Liszt, and still another Chopin. Renaud set himself an extremely varied list from each composer, calling for a versatility that is almost impossible.

He played some things extremely well. It does not occur to me that the arabesque legends of Liszt, "Walking on the Waves," could be more truthfully and sympathetically performed. No one could cavil at his playing of the toccata opus 7 in C minor of Schumann.

In long respects Renaud is a great pianist. He revealed things at yesterday's recital that warrant classing him as such. It did not seem to me that he appreciated fully the sweetness and delicacy of some of the little Schumann pieces, and while I admire his Chopin Scherzo in B minor, op. 20, I was not in sympathy with the playing of the Chopin nocturne Op. 9, No. 2, in E flat, but no man can suit all tastes. It was a satisfying and enjoyable recital.

CRIPPLED BY RHEUMATISM

Could Not Use Arms Even to Dress.

One and a Half Bottles of Medicine Cured.

It Was Hood's Sarsaparilla—The People's Medicine.

DIXON, Ill.—"When I was all crippled up with rheumatism, could not use my arms to dress or even do up my hair, one and a half bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me. Yes, cured me!

"I had been suffering most intensely from pains and aches in my arms, shoulders and knees. I knew my blood was out of order, but none of several medicines that I took relieved my great misery until I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was soon convinced that this medicine was all right. In a little while I could throw my arms around any way, do up my hair and do all my housework with no aches or pains whatever.

"I am sure Hood's Sarsaparilla cleansed my blood and that it renovated my whole system, in fact, made a new woman of me. I advise any one suffering from rheumatism or bad blood to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I repeat, it cured me, and I believe it will cure others. I have tested several of the Hood medicines and find it to be true in every sense that 'If Made by Hood It's Good.'" Emily J. Blake.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is one of those proprietary medicines that are indispensable to thousands of families—the millions of intelligent, prudent and economical men and women, who are really the bone and sinew of the country, but who have so little to gain and come on that professional service in case of sickness, are out of the question except where absolutely necessary.

There is no real substitute for Hood's Sarsaparilla. If urged to buy any preparation said to be "just as good" you may be sure it is inferior, costs less to make, and yields the dealer a larger profit.

Get Hood's Sarsaparilla today in liquid form or tablets called Sarsatabs.

SPREAD OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS CHECKED

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Dr. Simon Flexner, the laboratory director of the Rockefeller Institute, at a meeting of the National Academy of Sciences told of the efforts that have been made to check infantile paralysis. So far, he said, there has been no cure discovered for the disease. A system of isolation of the cases has been successful in checking its spread. The important feature is the destruction of the filth-germs from the respiratory tract, as it has been established that it is through this source that the contagion is communicated.

WRIGHTS SUED BY WOMEN FOR $50,000

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 22.—The Wright brothers, aviation promoters, are defendants in damage suits resulting from the accident at the State Fair in 1910. Mrs. John Lynch and Mrs. John Brewer, who were struck by Hoxey's aero, ask $25,000 each.

Rheumatism Advice

Prominent Doctor's Best Prescription Gladly Given at Home.

"From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime." This is said to be the quickest and best remedy known to the medical profession for rheumatism and back-aches. Results come after the first dose. If your druggist does not have Toris in stock he will get it for you. Only a few drops required to get relief, but it is inadvisable to take a patent medicine except at this. Better get the ingredients compounded in the original one ounce, sealed, full strength packages. Hundreds of the worst cases were cured here by this prescription last Winter.

WATTERSON BOOMS FOSS

The Boston Press Club celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary with a dinner in the Hotel Somerset and incidentally gave Henry Watterson, the famous editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, an opportunity to suggest that Governor Foss might be a Democratic presidential possibility in 1912.

Colonel Watterson had a place at the head of the table with Michael E. Hennessey, president of the club; Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald. He was having the time of his life with the "boys," when suddenly he became confidential and mysterious.

"I have said to your Governor," he remarked, "as I sat by his side to-night—'who knows, who knows?'"

When the significance of the sentence reached home it was greeted with applause.

More than 200 members and guests filled the old hall of the hotel, and at the head table were the heads of nearly every newspaper of note in the country.

President Hennessey in his introductory remarks, told of the struggles of the early days of the Press Club and its final emergence into its present prosperity. General Charles H. Taylor, as toastmaster, in introducing Governor Foss as the first speaker, said that "while Teddy was the greatest producer of newspaper copy in the United States, Foss was only seconded in Massachusetts by Johnny, the Mayor."

Mayor Fitzgerald spoke entertainingly concerning early Boston journalists and journalism.

Colonel Watterson was introduced as the "dean of journalism," and greeted with "He's a jolly good fellow," sung by every one standing, and only after being cheered again and again was he allowed to speak.

Colonel Watterson became reminiscent in the most delightful manner imaginable, and talked of journalism in general. He paid high tribute to the late Joseph Pulitzer as the most extraordinary producer of modern journalism.

M. E. Stone, general manager of the Associated Press, dwelt on the dignified journalism of the early part of the century.

The last speaker was Holman F. Day, who was referred to by Mr. Martin as a "journalist" and not a "newspaper man," and as the man who owned a limousine and a yacht. Mr. Day spoke of different aspects of journalism and provoked the laughter of his hearers time after time with his funny stories.

A letter from President Taft was read, in which the President regretted his inability to be present at the dinner and congratulated the club on its birthday.

SCHURMAN FOR ALDRICH PLAN

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 22.—President J. G. Schurman of Cornell University today gave his endorsement to the central bank system plan of monetary reform, advocated by Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, in an address before the convention of the American Bankers Association, declaring that it offers a method of reformation of currency and banking systems that can be fitted into existing conditions without working revolutionary changes, while at the same time it promises good chances of immunity from the machinations of political and Wall street interests.

Currency reform, he declared, is a question which in public interests should take precedence of partisan political issues and tariff agitation.

Else she doesn't think.

CLASSIC TUNES TO TONE CAFES

Hey, fellers! there's music again at the New Province House, the Genoa Cafe and Marlave's.

Don't hurry, boys; it's to be nothing but classical stuff; no "rag" or popular tunes.

Talk about fun with a string on it. The licensing board has put over a neat one on the patrons of the New Province, the Genoa and Marlave's.

How are the cleaning patrons going to get no any "ouths—se—sm" on the Miserere from "Il Trovatore"? How can they waggle and keep time with their feet to the Trauterel? And how are Percy and Nadie going to way ay when "Alexander's Ragtime Band" fails to "come on along"?

On October 13 (mind date) the Licensing Board revoked the music licenses of the New Province, the Genoa and the Marlave, three cafes which are grouped in or about Province court. This was done on complaint of Captain Sullivan of the Court square station. The captain said the patrons sang to the popular airs of the cafe orchestras and even stamped their feet when the grape was on the table and the evening on the fly.

The gist of the captain's kick was that too much noise came from the music and singing. So the Licensing Board took the cafe management to abolish the music.

The managements and the patrons immediately joined the "Squawk Club," saying "eats" without music was flat as a pancake.

Last night the Licensing Board considered the problem of table d'hote music and decided that the cafes may put the orchestras back on the job, but with this melancholy proviso—only classical airs shall be played, no popular music or "rag" time.

The board figures that classical music will improve the tone of the patrons. Just how classical music has to be to work an "up-lift" on the Boston table d'hoter, the board fails to say.

Wait till to-night. Patrons will find the orchestras at the post. But wait till the music programs develop merely our turned classical thing after another.

One imagines some regular sending up chummy note to the orchestra leader or head waiter, saying: "Give us some rag or a medley from 'Muff and Jeff.' Can that sleep-music.

The regular is told that nothing but classical goes, per the Licensing Board.

C. C. FERRIS, WHO PRESIDED AT DRY GOODS MEN'S FEAST

C. C. FERRIS

Mr. Ferris is president of the New England Dry Goods Association.

DRY GOODS MEN BOOM BOSTON

The use of the South Station site for the display of goods made and sold in New England was advocated by Henry C. Long at a meeting of the New England Dry Goods Association at the Boston City Club. Roger W. Babson was another speaker, and Charles C. Ferris, President of the association, and of the Gilchrist Company, presided at the banquet.

When the railroads are electrified, Mr. Long would have the South station built so you agree to that floor. On one floor could be displayed all varieties of cottons and the products of the "finest manufacturing section in the world" at nominal cost, and the world then would come to buy, he said, and there would be no need for New England manufacturers to have sales agencies in New York. As an alternative site for the building, Mr. Long suggested the foot of State street. At least the building must be located along the water front, and it must be State-owned, he said.

In that connection he advocated a belt-line railway fifty miles long in Greater Boston, running from Lynn to Fore River, and including every wharf. The railway, also, would be State-owned. The line would be a four-track elevated one, two tracks for passengers and two for freight. Factories would be attracted along the railway, he said, and all would ship at the same price. Workmen's homes could be fostered in the territory not utilized for the railway and factories. Mr. Long also advocated State-owned warehouses at all the docks.

Roger W. Babson of Wellesley, a business economist, spoke upon the three great factors of prosperity for a firm or corporation. These, he said, are character, knowledge and the understanding of the fundamental law of action and reaction in its application to business conditions.

"But unless character is combined with knowledge," he added, "little can be accomplished, and to know only the conditions in the dry goods trade is a grave mistake. The dry goods trade in 1912 actually depends less upon the price of dry goods than it does upon that of groceries. It is a fact that the dry goods business in this city is dependent upon the conditions of crops in Nebraska and Kansas and upon conditions in the Canadian Northwest, far more than upon those here in Boston.

"There is no such a thing as accident in business," he continued, "for it is all founded upon absolute law. Periods of great prosperity must inevitably be followed and balanced by periods of great depression."

It was voted by the association that a permanent secretary be installed for the purpose of increasing the general efficiency of the organization and a committee of three, composed of Henry C. Brine, W. C. Hawkins and Horace Bacon, was appointed to secure subscriptions from members for a guarantee fund to cover the cost of employing such a secretary and establishing headquarters.

THIRD SET OF TWINS BLESSES NANTUCKET

NANTUCKET, Nov. 22.—All Nantucket is to-day rejoicing in the birth of twins at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Josiah B. Gould. As this is only the third set of twins born on the island in the last twenty years, such a substantial increase of the population is very fully appreciated. The new arrivals are lusty boys, weighing six and seven pounds. The mother, who was Elizabeth Pitman Owen, was married to Mr. Gould in 1909, and this is the first birth in the family. She is forty-two years old and he is thirty-three. Mr. Gould some years ago received recognition for bravery from the United States Government for duty performed in the life-saving service.

JURY MUST PICK SLAYER OF TWO

TAUNTON, Nov. 22.—A Bristol County jury must decide upon the slayer of George Thomas and Lottie Hunt, who were killed by an automobile in Attleboro last April as they walked along the main street discussing the details of their wedding, which was to have occurred a few days afterward. Edward H. Hancock and Charles W. H. Day have been indicted and are now on trial for the killings, but only one of them can be found guilty. Each is now charged with manslaughter.

It is one of the most drastic trials, from this very reason, that has ever been heard in a Bristol County Court. Each defendant is doing his utmost to clear himself and his companion of criminal carelessness, but his attorney at the same time is doing all in his power to protect his client as one of the two if either is guilty.

The government claims that Hancock and Day, with Edgar Kelley and George Day, were joy riding, and that when they reached Attleboro they were driving reckless. Mr. Thomas and his fiancee had just left the latter's home and were walking in the highway, engrossed with the details of the wedding. Thomas was killed instantly. Miss Hunt died the next day.

It was claimed at the time that Day was running the machine and that he was intoxicated. Others said that Hancock was the driver. The result was that both were indicted and the jury must now decide which it was and if either of them was guilty of negligence so gross as to be guilty of manslaughter.

A number of witnesses were put on by the Government. Chief of Police Cyrus Wilbur of Attleboro said that Day had admitted to him that it was he who was running the car when the accident happened.

POLICEMAN BURNS HAND FINDING FIRE

Patrolman Fred Flinn of the Lagrange street station burned his fingers early today while searching for a fire in the basement of a building at Eliot and Tremont streets. Flinn was trying the doors of the various stores on his route when he came to the cigar store of Linzie Mascuvitis on the first floor of the corner building. He reached for the handle of the door, but his hand struck a pane of glass and he uttered a cry of pain. The glass was red hot. Flinn looked inside, but could see no fire. Smoke was pouring through cracks in the basement windows, however, and he rang in an alarm. The firemen confined the fire to the basement and Flinn patrolled the remainder of his shift nursing a sore finger.

Mrs. Whittemore's loss besides the cottage will amount to nearly $1,000, there having been $450 in bills in one of the rooms.

GIRL'S ATTEMPT TO DIE MYSTERY

Physicians at the Somerville Hospital are to-day trying to learn the reason of the attempted suicide of Miss Margaret C. Griffin, twenty-seven, who swallowed poison tablets on the doorsten of the home of William A. Webber, at No. 10 Irving street, West Somerville, after telephoning to him that she intended ending her life there. The identity of the young woman is a mystery. She said she lived at No. 63 Park Boulevard, Arlington, but nobody at that address knows the young woman, either by the name she gave, or by description.

Webber answered a telephone call, and a woman declared over the wire she was coming to his house to commit suicide. A few hours later the door bell rang furiously. Instead of going to the door, Webber telephoned to the police and told of receiving the telephone message.

Whether or not Webber knew the young woman could not be ascertained, as the police say he refused to reply to their questions along this line. Miss Griffin's condition is not serious.

$30,000 LOSS IN DANVERS FIRE

DANVERS, Nov. 22.—The box factory of Fred J. Derry on Holart street was practically destroyed by an incendiary fire which caused a loss of $30,000 early today. The fire spread to the Danvers Junction depot of the Boston & Maine Railroad, and several hundred dollars' damage was done to the roof. Three freight cars on a siding also caught, but a shift in the wind prevented further loss to railroad property.

This is the third time in recent years the factory has been crippled by fire, the cause of both of the previous fires never having been determined.

Two alarms brought out the entire Danvers fire department, and it was an hour and a half before the flames were under control. Patrolman Conners discovered a blaze in the storage shed adjoining the factory and two fires inside the main building, which is three stories in height and one hundred by seventy-five feet in area.

Only the fact that the sprinkler system was working prevented the fire getting a greater start than it did and perhaps sweeping the entire neighborhood. The fire could find no clue by which they could trail the incendiary.

ATWOOD TO FLY OR GET TICKET

Harry N. Atwood, the Boston aviator, told the AMERICAN over the long-distance telephone from the Hotel Manhattan, New York, today, that he means no discourtesy to the Harvard University Football Association, but he surely will see the Harvard-Yale game from an aeroplane next Saturday afternoon unless he is able to get tickets to watch the contest in the regular way.

He also declared that there is no danger that he and his machine will fall on the Stadium gridiron and thus injure players or spectators, because he will fly at a height that will, in case of emergency, enable him to glide away from the Stadium boundaries.

W. F. Garcelon, graduate manager of Harvard athletics, said, when Mr. Atwood first announced his intention of seeing the game from a flying machine, that he hoped Mr. Atwood would not attempt this feat, though there is no law to prevent it.

"It seems to me," said Mr. Garcelon, "that public opinion ought to prevent such a thing."

Mr. Atwood, however, said over the telephone:

"If I do fly there will be no danger to the football crowd. I should fly so high that I would not drop in the Stadium in any event. I will easily be able to glide to the ground.

"But, I don't want to fly. What I want is to see the game. If I can't see the game in the ordinary way, then I'll see it from my aeroplane.

"I've been unable to get tickets, though I applied in the usual way. However, the Polo Club of New York has promised to get me tickets. If it does, of course I won't fly. The tickets are all I want."

SANTO DOMINGO, Nov. 22.—The assassins of President Caceres were executed today. The situation is so serious that the diplomatic corps has now taken charge, fearing anti-American outbreaks.

Mme. Martini Favors Dance That Americans Can Call Their Own

Mme. Marie Louise Martini, opera singer, who prophesies that America will produce a national dance based on tecktop, waltz and schottische.

By SYBIL WARNE.

America needs a national dance and will have one, says Madame Martini, a French opera singer, who will sing at the Boston opera this Winter.

It will not be like the poetical Egyptian or the Greek dances, she says, but will be as symmetrical and as beautiful in every way. It will be the evolution of the waltz, schottische, and the back-and-fling.

Madame Martini thinks American girls are beautifully graceful. She has seen them dance in gay Paree and in the States—and they danced the same—lovely, oh, so lovely!

"They just love to dance, and I love to watch them," said Madame Martini. She compared their dancing to that of the French girls, and, strange to say, not, as usually, to the disparagement of the Yankee misses.

"They dance much more beautifully than the French girls," she declared. "And they dance simply for the sake of dancing, because they really enjoy it."

In comparing their dancing to the dancing of the French maids, she said, somewhat woefully:

"Ah! Dancing has become a lost art in France."

Apropos to the national dance, she said:

"Practically every European nation has a dance of its own. Italia, mother of the Aryan race, leads the world in her national dance. And then we have France, Germany, Austria and Spain.

"Now it is America's turn to have a national dance. And she will have one before many years pass. It will be a beautiful, artistic dance, and the American girls will do justice to it.

"I have watched the American girls dance in France and I have seen them dance in America—they are lovely dancers. Oh! How I love to watch them. They are so rhythmical. And they so seem to enjoy their dancing. Their dances are simple but they dance them artistically. No nation so enjoys dancing as America."

"And the national dance for America—what do you think it will be?" she was asked.

"That is hard to tell. But I think it will be the evolution of the schottische, waltz, and the two-step. Those are the popular American dances, I believe."

"But the cakewalk?"

"Oh, I was simply joking about it. That is not a typical American dance. But, of course, it must be considered."

"You have seen the cakewalk?"

"Yes. Not only here but in other countries. It is a lovely and it interested me."

Madame Martini speaks little English. A reporter found her just as she was about to go on for a rehearsal at the Boston Opera House. Antone Dubois, assistant to Monsieur Caplet, kindly consented to serve as interpreter.

"Princess Sits Diva," she was told, "has suggested that the American national dance reply the dancing of the Pilgrim Fathers, the battles with the Indians, the self-sacrificing spirit of love and brotherhood, the Declaration of Independence, the Revolution, the Wars of 1812, and the Rebellion, in fact, the development of the country.

"Naturally," replied Madame Martini, "it will typify something of American history. But it is impossible to say just what. The national dance will come gradually—and naturally. One person will not compose it. But it will come in time."

"And the Princess suggests that such a dance would add to the beauty of the American girls," she was told.

"Ah! But your American girls are already very beautiful. I love to watch them. I love them. They are natural in every way. They enjoy themselves, and they make enjoyment for others. There is nothing artificial in their merriment.

"The same with their dancing. They dance because they love to. That is why they dance so beautifully."

BROCKTON FINDS AUTO HELPS CITY

By J. C. KERRIBON.

Brockton's municipal departments are soon to be thoroughly "autofied." During the past year city officials have seen the economy of the auto for city work, and every department that has any running around to do now uses the buzz wagon.

Fire Chief Harry L. Marston was the first to replace the horse with an auto and the others have followed his lead. The chief now has a fast Lenox, a Boston-made car. The department also has a Pope-Hartford combination truck, known as the "Flying Squadron," and the fire committee is about to purchase another combination chemical and hose wagon.

The police department has a large Packard touring car and an E. M. F. The street department has a Jackson, the building department has an Overland, the wire chief of the fire department has a Maxwell, the water department has a Pope-Toledo, a Hudson and a Cadillac, while the Mayor has a Hudson roadster.

The two Marquette-Buicks which are to do battle in the forthcoming Vanderbilt left Boston for Savannah yesterday, Charlie Basle has had these two cars in this locality for a week or so trying them out on the excellent roads hereabouts and putting them in shape so that they could render a good account of themselves in the forthcoming contest.

They are both painted white and look veritable speed propositions. Basle, who is to drive one of them, also left Boston yesterday, and will arrive in Savannah tomorrow night in ample season to get in a few practice runs over the course before the starting of the races. The Marquette-Buick, it will be remembered, was the car with which Burman made such an excellent showing in the Grand Prize of a year ago, and much is expected from them this year.

BERNHARDT TO REMAIN SINGLE

PARIS, Nov. 22.—Sarah Bernhardt indignantly denies the report that she is about to marry Lou Tellegen, a twenty-six-year-old Flemish actor who has been playing subordinate parts in her company.

A correspondent who called at Mme. Bernhardt's house to inquire about the report encountered a French journalist who had been on the same errand making a hasty exit after having barely escaped having his ears boxed.

Mme. Bernhardt had difficulty in finding words to express her opinion of the stupidity of the report.

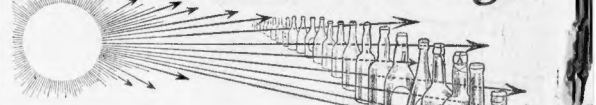
Even Pure Beer is Sensitive to Light



The direct rays of the sun on beer will start decay.

Dark glass gives protection against light.

Schlitz is sold in dark bottles, to protect its purity from the brewery to your glass.

We use the costliest materials. One of our partners selects the barley.

We go to Bohemia for hops.

Schlitz is aged for months before it is marketed, to prevent biliousness. It cannot ferment in your stomach.

We filter it through white wood pulp. Sterilize every bottle.

DEFENCE HEARD AT TAR TRIAL

LINCOLN CENTER, Kan., Nov. 22—A. M. Simms, one of the men accused of complicity in attacking Mary Chamberlain on a country road, near Shady Bend, and casting her with her continued his story in court to-day.

Miss Chamberlain was the last government witness. She gave a coherent narrative of the episode in a low, even voice. Not once did she lose her self-control, neither did she speak with any feeling against the defendants. On cross examination her story was unshaken.

She said that Ed Rieord had invited her to attend a dance at Beverly and she consented to go. She said that she objected to his remarks and told him she desired to go back home. They started back to Shady Bend.

"What happened on the way back to town?" was asked Miss Chamberlain.

"Five masked men took me from the buggy. Three of them carried me around behind the buggy, threw me down and smeared tar on my shoulders and my lower limbs."

Q.—Did you recognize any of them? A.—Not then.

Q.—Where was Ricord? A.—He was over by the fence.

Q.—Did he assist you in any way? A.—He did not.

Q.—Did you call to Ed to help you? A.—Yes, two or three times.

Q.—What happened then? A.—They poured the tar on my lower limbs.

Q.—Did Ricord accompany you back to town? A.—He did.

Q.—Did you see any men in the road as you were going back to town? A.—Yes, four of them.

Q.—Did you call Ricord's attention to them? A.—Yes.

MRS. PATTERSON EXPECTS TO WIN

Woman Accused of Murder Relieved Since Jury Is Selected.

DENVER, Nov. 22—With the arts, charms and wiles of a beautiful woman save her from the gallows no matter how strong the evidence against her may be?

This is the problem in psychology which will be worked out in the trial of Gertrude Patterson, who shot her husband, Charles A. Patterson, on September 25.

Shortly after the prosecution began submitting its first testimony to-day Mrs. Patterson announced that she believed that the problem would be solved in her favor.

"I will be acquitted," she declared. Mrs. Patterson was quite a different woman from yesterday's Mrs. Patterson when she returned to the court to-day.

With the arts known only to pretty women she had transformed herself from the haggard, sleepless woman of yesterday to the winsome, charming, beautiful girl that she was before her trial began.

She had recovered from the terrible ordeal of jury selection, when hour after hour she had heard the harsh voice of Prosecutor Benson demand of the talesmen that they have no scruples against sending the fair prisoner to death.

Defence May Be "Insanity."

This constant, never-ceasing cry for her life had completely unnerved her. But when the jury of married men was picked and every man on it had Mrs. Patterson's personal approval before he was accepted by her attorneys, Mrs. Patterson began to recover her nerve, her remarkable composure, her winning smile that caused a millionaire to lavish a fortune upon her and sent another man to his death. She slept well last night and her every action to-day was that of vivacious Mrs. Patterson of the days before she entered a prison cell.

The defence of Mrs. Patterson may rest upon a plea of temporary insanity. It is believed that the groundwork of the defence for her will rest upon such a plea, supported with the ugly charge of white slavery, directed against the husband she is alleged to have murdered.

The temporary insanity idea seems to have been suggested by Attorney Hilton, one of Mrs. Patterson's lawyers, in questions he directed at talesmen in selecting the jury.

The lawyer asked one talesman if the latter would consider proof of insanity as a proof that the killing was done in self-defence. Hilton did not proceed further along that line of questioning, but his questions were taken to indicate that he might offer for his client the plea that she was insane at the time of the tragedy from the effects of alleged cruelty and inhuman treatment.

Latest picture of Mrs. Gertrude Patterson, on trial for her life at Denver.

Dead Man's Words Repeated.

On the other hand, like a pursuing nemesis, there came to-day the dead man's voice, speaking through the lips of his friends. According to them Patterson's story could be told in a jury would be that his wife, after the couple had agreed to forget her relations with Millionaire Strauss, resumed these relations and sought to induce her husband to consent to this condition, else to provide him with ample means while he fought out the suit against tuberculosis.

Strauss continues to remain in the background. It is claimed he will not come forward at any time during the trial. The lawyers do not seem to believe he will be a witness.

"I have not heard from him and I have not asked him for help," Mrs. Patterson said. "I expect my parents to stand by me through thick and thin. I'd be sorry though to have my mother hear some of the things that will be brought out in this trial."

Begin Testimony.

The taking of the testimony in the case began to-day. The celerity which with which a jury was secured broke all records in Colorado in cases where death penalty is demanded.

The twelve men selected are all married and half of them have children. Their ages range from twenty-five to forty-five years. It was the evident intention of the defence to get as many young men on the jury as possible. Each side used thirteen peremptory challenges before the jury box was filled.

The following are the men who will decide the fate of Mrs. Patterson: Charles B. Bosworth, twenty-seven, real estate agent, married; Ray S. Perry, laundryman, married; William Gartner, thirty-nine, real estate, married, seven children; John P. Doyle, thirty-three, hat dealer, married, four children; John Hinkle, barber, thirty-five, married; John T. Brookes, salesman, thirty, married, two children; Stafford H. Beckett, thirty-six, grocer, married; Francis J. Crain, twenty-eight, mining engineer, married; Harvey W. Bird, thirty-four, produce broker, married, one daughter; M. C. Kinder, forty-one, manager Colorado Sheet Metal Works, married, two children; Charles S. Oppenlander, forty-four, grocer, married; James F. Flint, thirty-eight, president Flint-Lomax Electric and Manufacturing Co., married, four children.

Seven of the men now in the box have expressed a willingness to hang a woman, although, in answer to Mr. Benson's questions they said they were not opposed to the death penalty in general.

To Make Your Hair Soft, Bright and Fluffy

(Fashion's Guide)

"The reason many women find it difficult to arrange the coiffure pleasingly is because of the too-free use of wet shampoos, which make hair dull, brittle and 'stringy.'

"One of the most pleasing things with which to cleanse the scalp of impurities and keep the hair clean, fluffy and silky, is 4 ounces of either orris root or corn meal and 4 ounces of therox. Mix together and sprinkle a tablespoonful on the scalp, then brush thoroughly through the hair. This rids the hair and scalp of dust and dandruff, and a few times using tones the scalp and hair roots, causing the hair to grow soft, brilliant and easy to manage."

WOMAN FINED FOR ATTACK

How Mrs. Mary A. Adams, formerly of Brockton but now of the Back Bay, came to his room and assaulted him while he was in bed and several days later knocked down his stenographer, Miss Edna K. Trumbull, on Congress street, was told by Andrew J. Whitlock of the Hotel Cambridge, No. 483 Beacon street, who is manager of the Stich-Hirsh Company of No. 170 Milk street to Judge Murray in the Municipal Court today. Judge Murray fined Mrs. Adams $50, of which $25 was for assaulting Miss Trumbull and $15 for assaulting Whitlock. She appealed and was held in $500. She was then until to-morrow to raise the money. Bedsteep was given at the cause of Mrs. Adams's attack.

Mrs. Adams has a suit for $30,000 for alienated Whitlock for breach of promise. The case is now pending in court.

Whitlock testified:

"I first met Mrs. Adams in 1907. I am not married. I met Mrs. Adams frequently from 1907 on to the time of the attack on Congress street, although since July, 1910, I haven't been around with her so frequently, but she came to my office on numerous occasions. The reason for her threats was jealousy of Miss Trumbull. She said Miss Trumbull came between us. I made a complaint against her on August 16, the day after she had been in my room.

"Here he gave a detailed description of the trouble on Congress street. "I was walking on Congress street with Miss Trumbull," he said, "and saw Miss Trumbull fall down. I did not see Mrs. Adams strike her. As Miss Trumbull fell Mrs. Adams stepped in between us. I thought she was going to step on Miss Trumbull. She said to me: 'You see, I didn't go away.'

"A week or ten days previous to this Mrs. Adams had asked me for $10 to go to country. I gave her the money. I had given her money and other things before. I knew she was in poor shape. Mrs. Adams frequently went to my room without my permission. The elevator boys in the hotel had pass keys to my room and to her in. I forbade them to let her in last Spring—all except the boy who let her in on August 15.

Miss Trumbull told of the assault, of how Mrs. Adams had threatened to kill her and of how she worked for Whitlock for the past three years.

H. S. Mosley, who saw the assault, also testified, as did Dr. Grant Cabot of the Hotel Cambridge, who bandaged the wounds on Miss Trumbull's head.

R. W. SEARS, WHO LECTURED BEFORE CLUB IN NORWOOD

RICHARD W. SEARS

BOSTONIAN NOW WEEK OVERDUE

The Bostonian of the Leyland Line, from Manchester, Eng., is out nineteen days to-day and is about a week overdue at Boston.

PACK HALL TO HEAR R. W. SEARS

The lecture by Richard W. Sears, photographer of the Boston AMERICAN, given at the Norwood Universalist church, under the auspices of the Men's Club, was one of the most attractive events ever held by the organization. The auditorium was crowded, a general invitation having been given out to men to attend, and among those present were several clergymen, members of the school board, town officials and prominent men.

Chairman James A. Hartshorn of the Board of Selectmen presided and Mr. Sears was introduced by his comrade in the Ardents, Perley B. Thompson, chairman of the committee of arrangements, as a "live wire" lecturer. From the time Mr. Sears began there was not a dull moment, his pictures having wide range. During an intermission Mr. Sears showed several small cameras which he used when he wanted to avoid detection, commenting on several episodes.

"Dick," as he is known by everybody, showed for the first time his pictures taken from an aeroplane, he being the first photographer in New England to photograph from the sky. These were vividly applauded as were many other photographs. He closed with a set of slides showing scenes along the Cape Cod canal.

The pictures ranged from aviation to trips to the Bermudas, and from football up to date to views of Norwood. It is probable that the club will try to induce Mr. Sears to return.

BOSTON & MAINE'S PLANS APPROVED

Of that amount $1,300,000 is for new equipment and $577,806 for land at Lynn, Mass., for four tracks in connection with the abolition of grade crossings.

YALE HOLDS LAST SCRIMMAGE TO-DAY FOR BIG CONTEST

Yale Rules 10-8 Favorite Over Harvard for Big Game

If the Yale bulldog picks up his cars a bit to-night he may be due to hear loud whoops of enthusiasm from Har ard. The whoops will come from the mass meeting of the Harvard student body, to be held in Harvard Union, followed by a torchlight parade around the college yard. Yale is 10 to 8 favorite to-day in Boston, nevertheless.

It's all to let the Harvard rooters lose uncork some of the enthusiasm they have bottled up in anticipation of next Saturday's Harvard-Yale football game on the Stadium.

They do tols every year at Harvard just before the big Yale game, only the seats go to pot extra ginger this time when the game is to be played on the home grounds, as it is this year.

The mass meeting will be held in the living room of the main house. Over 1,500 students expect to be there, though some powerful squeezing will be in order before all that number gets in.

H. L. Cuddie, president of the student council, will preside and lead the singing and cheering. This will be quite a job to itself, for the new songs are to be gone over and everyone on the floor will learn from Captain Fisher and Coach Haughton down to the "subs," are to be on hand then. The team will not be at the meeting, but they will be cheered, just to show that Harvard has confidence.

Waiken Claude Echoes.

There will be a wild time at the mass meeting, also a band. The band will play for the singing. One of the songs which will rouse the claude echoes and Cambridge is the new and popular anti-Yale composition, sung to the air of "Our Director," as follows:

Hard luck for poor old Eli,
Tough on the Blue;
Now all together,
Smash them and break through
Against the line of Crimson
They can't get Harvard
Three cheers for Harvard
Three cheers with Yale!
Rah, rah, rah!

Another, not so new, is the "Soldiers' Field," whose vigorous lines run thus:

O'er the stands in flaming Crimson,
Harvard banners fly,
Cheer on cheer like volleyed thunder,
Echo to the sky.
See the Crimson tide is turning,
Squads, wave end and center,
Then FIGHT, FIGHT, FIGHT,
For we win to-night.
Old Harvard for evermore!

Dr. Lowell May Be There.

There will be no "cuts" at the meeting. Nobody wants to eat, except in the sense of "eat 'em alive," as applied to the Yale team.

What the Harvard boys must do to Yale Saturday afternoon will be told by Captain "Bob" Fisher and Coach Percy Haughton. The latter can particularly be relied upon to give a red-hot talk to the players. He will tell them to come to the game to the last man, to cheer early and often and to support the "arterial crimson" team to the last minute of play. Mr. Haughton can "put over" a brisk and snappy line of football talk in great shape and get the heart-to-heart talk to the collegians to-night is expected to be great stuff.

There is a bare possibility that President Lowell will show up at the meeting, as he is greatly interested to football and in real college spirit.

About 9:15, after songs and speeches are over at the Union, the students will pile out and form a torchlight parade in front of the Union. They will march through Harvard Square, around the "Yard" and maybe down by the "Gold Coast," they will cheer again and again, will sing and will show the Cambridge natives that a college celebration is held serious in spots.

Usually these parades wind up with a final burst of cheering in front of Ulverson City Hall in the yard.

All this racket to-night is partly in anticipation of the collegians going to-morrow the first and only open practice by the varsity team at the Stadium. There will be more cheering at the open practice. The "old grads," who are in town for the big game, will go out there. Two years ago, when Yale held the first open practice brought out representatives of classes as far back as '73. Last year, on the game being in New Haven, not so many "old grads" came down to the town, moreover, however, there may be quite an assembly, especially of those who live in the metropolitan district.

Harvard Stock Takes Jump.

Harvard stock took a big rise when Bob Fetter, the star quarterback of the Crimson eleven, donned his togs and generalled the team in the twenty-minute scrimmage with an eleven composed of subs and coaches in the Stadium. This was the first time Potter had been seen in action since his injury to the Tiger game at Princeton and his reappearance was the occasion for great rejoicing among the followers of the Harvard eleven.

Potter led the Harvard team for fifteen of the twenty-minute scrimmage and showed all of his former snap and precision in selecting plays and giving signals. It is now a certainty that he will start the game with Yale and play at least a part of the game.

Gardner, who has been taking Potter's place since the latter's injury, is a good man, as evidenced by his showing against Dartmouth, but he not only lacks the coolness and good judgment of Potter, but also his cleverness with the forward pass which is very likely to play a very prominent part in the contest.

Potter was the life of the team, prior to his enforced layoff, and when he was taken out of the Tiger game the team showed a decided slump. The men had become used to his leadership and placed confidence in his presence, which means much to an eleven in the important game.

In the scrimmage he did not show the least ill effect of his long absence from the fight, and his return to the game Saturday should be accompanied by an increased offensive power in the Harvard forwards.

At all events, everyone in sympathy with the Crimson team is pleased to hear that the most reliable quarter is back in the game and available for use on Saturday.

Work Was Strenuous.

The work of the varsity was unusually strenuous for a week of the Yale game. In previous years the only drill allotted to the team, in such a time as this was a fast signal drill, or at all events a dummy scrimmage, but the men engaged in a real live up and tack scrimmage, in which neither the varsity nor the team opposing scored.

The varsity's opponents were composed of some of the subs, together with a number of the coaches, who played very formidable aggregation to fight against, and the result was that the varsity was twice held for downs near their opponent's goal line.

The varsity was given the ball at the start of the scrimmage in midfield. Twice the ball was worked down to the five and ten yard line of the subs by the Crimson eleven, but in both cases the varsity was held for downs.

Just about this time every year, the Crimson players are afflicted with this microbe known as overconfidence, and a Harvard thing it is. It is perhaps one of the worst beasts known to germdom, and this is true at least with reference to Harvard.

Real Strength Not Known.

The fact that, Harvard defeated the Green does not necessarily mean that the Crimson can do the same to Yale. It is a well-known fact that Yale is a different team when it faces Harvard, from the team which has lined up against other eleven, and it is always a change for the worse as far as Harvard is concerned.

Arrangements have been made to have the varsity spend the night before the big game at the Vesper Club at Lowell away from the excitement and noise which is certain to accompany Cambridge on the eve of such an important occasion.

LAST PRACTICE FOR YALE SQUAD BEFORE BIG GAME

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 22.—Old Eli's football sons will turn out this afternoon for the last time in 1911 for daily practice. Varsity and varsity scrub will play Yale Field and the coaches order is fifteen minutes of fast signal practice, but they will take care not to call for any dangerous attacks for fear of spoiling a varsity eleven on the eve of the biggest game of the season.

More than 1,000 under-graduates were expected to-day to cheer the varsity as a token of endorsement and confidence. The parade will be led by a brass band and a march out on the city streets to the Yale Field. Two gates to the grounds will be opened to allow them to enter.

The line of march to-day practice the scrubs take the centre of the street for their annual celebration. They will push their famous celebration, dancing in a serpentine manner through the down town gas into which are thrown the old bits of paper which litter the streets. Last year the scrubs will cheer for Captain Howe and Coach Hinkey, a member of the varsity.

The squad that leaves here at 1:45 tomorrow afternoon for Boston will contain twenty varsity players, Friday afternoon twenty more scrubs will go to Boston armed with still-line badges.

The condition of Captain Howe is still unsatisfactory. He has a slight cold and does not feel in fighting trim, but Trainer Mack believes that he will be right on the top of his game Saturday in the Stadium. Howe's strength is half of Yale's hope of scoring and without him in command Yale can hope to do no better than to play Harvard to a scoreless tie.

Yale will go to Boston with only two matters which the rules don't cover between Saturday's game is played. One is the freak first homer and goal, the way Princeton scored against Dartmouth, Yale and Princeton talked this over before the game last Saturday.

Camp's "Football Face."

Walter Camp, Jr., Yale's star punter, is the happiest player in the gridiron game to-day. In the games played this season the youngster has proved himself a "chip of the old block."

LETTERS GIVEN AT HOLY CROSS

WORCESTER, Nov. 22.—Great preparations are being made by Holy Cross and Worcester Tech for their annual game to be played here next Saturday. This was originally scheduled to be played last Saturday, but the rain forced the game to be postponed.

The extra work for practice was a benefit for both teams. Several improvements were needed by both teams, and it is expected that they will be made before the week is over. The track at both institutions have been hard, and no doubt will be given the players till Friday.

The work on Monday at Holy Cross was light, nothing but signal work and running down under punts being given the men. The work to-day was hard, however, and a great amount will be given out to-morrow.

Expecting that the game with Tech would be played last Saturday and that Holy Cross would again be sent an eleven would be held following the game, the board of governors of the New England A. A. held its meeting and awarded eighteen players their letters for the season. Six of the men, Captain Hiker Jordan, Monahan, Collins, Toolin, Whalen and Kennedy, are seniors at college and will play their last game on Saturday.

Fred Gotergen, the former captain of the Rexbury Latin team, and Jim Davitt are the only candidates for the captaincy and from present indications the Boston boy should win. The men who were awarded the letters are: Toolin, Kennedy, Collins, Monahan, Pickett, Donavan, Whalen, Colleary, McCabe, Green, Nolk, Quinlan, Metzeter, O'Brien, Davitt, Ostergren, Carmody, Captain Joy and Manager Craig.

ABEL GETS DECISION OVER TERRY NELSON

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 22.—Jake Abel of Chattanooga won the decision over Terry Nelson of Philadelphia in their scheduled eight-round bout, although unable to secure a knock-out. Nat Dewey of Kansas City won a decision over Topeka Jack Johnson in their bout here to-night. Kilbane challenged Abel to fight here Thanksgiving Day and was accepted.

YOUNG FRANK ERNE STALLS JOE SEIGER

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—Although down in the first session for a short count of nine from a left hook to the jaw, Young Frank Erne of Harrisburg managed to hold his own with Joe Seiger of the Douglas A. C. of Boston and was carried several times for hitting on the break away.

RUSTLERS TO BE SOLD NEXT WEEK

That the Boston National League team is to be sold at the time the directors of the club hold their annual meeting next week is the story that is now going the rounds. It is well known that President Russell received many offers for the club since the season ended, and it is understood that but a few thousand dollars stood in his way several weeks ago when he received an offer from Western baseball magnates.

That plans were under way for the sale of the property of Mr. Russell's estate down with his final illness, is not denied by those who are in close touch with the club affairs.

It is said that L. Cones Page, a former Rustler stockholder, is in line to buy up the controlling interest which was held by President Russell.

The disposition of the Boston Club will probably be made known soon, as it is expected that the will of the late president will be made known within a few days.

The executors of Mr. Russell's estate will be in Boston the first of next week, and something may then be announced as to the disposition of the club.

It is believed that Fred Tenney will remain manager of the club, and that all of the dead president's plans will be carried out for the year.

The funeral will be held at his late home in New York to-morrow afternoon. He leaves a widow and five children.

SULLIVAN LOSES BOUT TO WALTER COFFEY

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Walter Coffey, the California middle-weight, defeated Montana Dan Sullivan in a 10-round bout at the Fairmount A. C. Although the fighting was furious at times, neither showed any championship calibre which has been claimed for them. Coffey had a powerful right punch, but showed a decided lack of ring technique, and it is known how to use his punch Sullivan would not have lasted three rounds. Both men were badly damaged.

Schoolboy Sports

The Milton High School team would like to arrange a game with some speedy high school eleven any date previous to Thanksgiving. Coach Sid Haselton has one of the fastest teams that he has had in Milton for years, and as yet has not suffered a defeat. A championship may be in jeopardy as some of the players' cars and a game with a hedvy team would be dangerous. Seth Parker, Milton High School.

Mechanics Arts is not sure of a Turkey Day game, but will be glad to play a game of a good game that day. It will be remembered that these teams played a 0-0 game early in the season and another battle between these teams would not be a bad attraction.

Not many big games will be played in Boston to-day. The leading high school eleven have big annual games for Thanksgiving, and will not play on Friday or following Thursday the players will be rested up. Preparations are already under way for Thanksgiving Day football affairs and a great game should be played.

That challenge issued by the Chicago Tech eleven for the title of the champion high school boys. Several teams of greater or lesser ability have taken up the challenge and are confident that they could defeat the Windy City team, but it is not stated that any of the faculties would allow the game to be played, as there is no big guarantee of $1,500 would more than clear expenses.

Jack Lawless, the clever quarterback on the Medford High team, will enter Harvard next fall, according to word from Medford. He is bound to prove to be a valuable addition to the ranks of one of the cleverest and speediest generals in the college game. Lady Fitzsimmons, one of years he should have the same distinction at Harvard.

Abington High has had its hard lucks this year for fair. In only one or two games have they been able to present its full strength. Captain McKeown, Robertson and Hollaway have been the stars of on the team, have all been out of the game. Hollaway and McKeown are out of the game at present, but it is expected that they will get back for the Thanksgiving game. McKeown sprained his ankle in the Rockland game, but he frequently was the victim of Kline's rushes and inflicting.

Halfback Hal

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

HALFBACK HAL was my good old pal.
With a heart like the heart of an ox;
At the quarter's sign he would smash the line
Till the wounded were piled in blocks.
And as like as not, when the game grew hot,
He would sing some quaint old song.
For he loved to deride the opposing side,
And jolly his boys along.

Well, Halfback Hal, my good old pal,
Went in against old Purdue;
And the fact I deplore that he bit off more
Than the average halfback could chew.
He was tackled so hard by a cave-man guard
That he bit the earth with a thud
In the ward that night, with his head still light,
This is the song that he sung:

"Way down upon the Suwanee River,
Alexander's Ragtime Band,
The Army and Navy forever,
Columbia, the Gem of the Land.
Come back to Erin, mavourneen,
And meet my old pal Sat."
Then the wordless cause—they were sung to Hiaac—
And deported with Halfback Hal.

FLANAGAN BEATS WALKER EASILY

NEW BEDFORD, Nov. 22.—Harold Walker of England, who has been looked upon as a comer, was sent back to the preliminary ranks by Tommy Flanagan of Boston, who gave him a terrific beating in their 10-round bout before the New Bedford A. A.

In the tenth Flanagan beat Walker about the ring and one of the latter's seconds jumped in and led him to his corner.

NATIONAL AMATEUR TITLE BOUTS IN APRIL

The National amateur boxing championships, which have become an important event in this city, will probably be held again under the auspices of the B. A. A. at Mechanics Building next April. While the Boston club has not yet put in a bid for the championships, it was given at the A. A. U. meeting in New York last Monday night that the B. A. A. can get the selection if it wants it. As the club has held the championships several years and made the affair a big success, it will ask for the election to hold them again.

McDONALD WINS SPEEDWAY CUPS

W. J. McDonald was returned the biggest prize winner in the series of the Metropolitan Driving Club just ended, four of his horses carrying off the emblems of Charles River Speedway. No other member of the club succeeded in winning more than one trophy with his horses.

Chief Wilkie, champion of the speedway, was the star performer for Mr. McDonald, he capturing the speed pacing cup by defeating a half in 59½ seconds. Other victors in the McDonald string were Dempsey, the speed trotting cup, with a half in 1:07; Lucy La Rondo, the event for speed ring cup, and Castle Todd, the point trotting cup.

This was a great showing for a member of the club to make, and particularly so in the Metropolitan, in which are owned the best trotters and pacers of any driving club in New England.

Major Dillard, owned by J. Holmes, won the second point trotting cup, while in the pacing division, Dan Lily, the property of Sam Hastings, secured the pacing ring cup. Lady Fitzsimmons, owned by M. F. Maher, took the point cup, and Helena Direct, owned by Mr. Todd, the second point cup.

Lady Fitzsimmons and Helena Direct were in a tie for the point cups, but under the rules of the club the winner of first money is established by the horse having won the largest average heats.

An invitation has been extended to W. J. McDonald by the Dorchester Driving Club to bring to the Franklin Field Speedway his pacing gelding Chief Wilkie, to meet Charley King and his trotter, Dempster, together with that big pacer Lily, to be decided at the matinee of Thanksgiving Day forenoon.

President A. M. Johnson of the Dorchester Driving Club has decided to open the Franklin Field speedway for the season.

This means, as the club members at Charles River Speedway yesterday stated, that Mr. Johnson will have no opposition in his work in the chase being to the entire satisfaction of all.

THANKSGIVING

By MELVIN WILLIAMS

A week from Thursday is Thanksgiving Day—one of the days when the people of this nation take off their hats to the hardy old enthusiasts who once lived in this locality.

Every man who has family ties will most likely be with his folks on Thanksgiving, and men without relatives may be out looking for the foundation of a family of their own.

All this leads up to the fact that a man wishes to be sure that he is well dressed, or his enjoyment of the occasion is dimmed.

When somebody asks you to "pass the squash" or to "slip the celery boat along the skids," you want to feel that the shoulder of your coat is not bunched over behind your left ear.

You want to look like the "right feller," and in order to do so you must be well dressed—look the part.

I suggest that you have Gale & Kent, the tailors of 96 Court Street, make you a suit of clothes or an overcoat for Thanksgiving.

If ordered at once, they will guarantee delivery in ample time.

The prices for suits or overcoats made by Gale & Kent run from $15 to $25, and they are easily worth more money.

Thousands of men are now getting all their clothes at 96 Court Street who used to pay $35 to $50 for suits—either tailor-made or ready-made.

So I think it is up to every man who values a saving of $15 on a suit to give Gale & Kent an order, just to see what they can do for him in fit, style, workmanship and wear.

A joyful Thanksgiving to you, anyhow—and a hearty appetite, followed by a good digestion.

FORD MEMORIAL HAS STRONG FIVE

The Ford Memorial Branch of the Boston Y. M. C. A. is developing a fast 140-pound basketball team and they will go out after the championship of the teams in that division. Practice is being held every evening in the gymnasium and the candidates are preparing for an early start.

The team is composed of stars who have already made names for themselves on the floor. Berlo, the clever centre who played with the Prescott, Me., Town team, are out and they are making good in practice and will undoubtedly find a place on the line-up. Teams desiring a game address Charles W. Newman, Y. M. C. A., 1178 Tremont street, Roxbury.

HJALMAR LUNDIN TO WRESTLE ROMANOFF

Romanoff, the giant Cossack wrestler, will have Hjalmar Lundin, the big Swede, as his opponent Thanksgiving night in Mechanics Building. The selection of Lundin was made after nearly all the crack heavyweights of the country had sidestepped the big foreigner. Romanoff and Lundin will go for a finish, two out of three falls. Manager Toohey is working on a semi-final which will bring together two of the greatest favorites Boston fans board of. This, with the contest between Burns and Polski, will complete the program.

HURLEY BESTS BURKE IN TEN-ROUND BOUT

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—"Fighting Bill" Hurley of Glens Falls defeated Sailor Burke of the Brooklyn middle-weight, in a ten-round bout in Brooklyn. Hurley had the better of seven rounds, while the remaining three were even. Hurley and Burke grappled in the seventh round, but by holding the sailor managed to last out the round. Burke was rushed several times by the referee for holding.

SLUGGING CASES TO BE HEARD TO-NIGHT

There will be a meeting of the Roxbury League Games Committee to-night at the Malden High School to consider the suspension of Howard Campbell of the Everett A. C. and Alexander Lewis of the Somerville High football teams, who were put out of the league games for slugging. It will take a unanimous vote of the committee to reinstate the players.

AMMUDIN LOSES IN BILLIARD MATCH

The Brooklyn team of National League billiard players defeated Boston in the championship series of the league at the Imperial rooms by a score of 50 to 40. Hudson and Ammudin were high men, and Ammudin for cotton. Hudson will play Ammudin to-night.

McDonough Meets Desher in Long Bout at Manchester

By JACK CONWAY.

A. A. U. MEET FOR FRISCO IN 1912

NEW YORK Nov. 22 At the A A U national convention on Monday it was agreed that the next annual meet should be given to San Francisco in 1915, and then will be held in connection with the exposition over the Panama canal. George Jeanes of the Olympic Club of Frisco who came here as a delegate representing the Pacific Coast, brought back word of this decision and it met with universal approval. Everybody thinks the Golden Gate city would be a good place for the big athletic tank vent, and Gough the national track and field championships were held at Portland Ore. in 1905 and at Seattle in 1909 the best men athletes will not object to another long journey to the Pacific coast. The meeting was a pleasant one for the delegates, and around the banquet table the big swimming events. Other championships in many sports must be arranged upon the Canadian dates, but just what dates will be decided upon Secretary James Sullivan is not prepared to say at present. He will confer with the Canadian officials and then announce the dates.

DYSON DEFEATS TOMMY HOUCK

NEW YORK Nov. 22 Tommy Houck a local featherweight, outpointed Young Dyson of Providence in a fast 10-round bout at Browns A A.

Dyson showed up well only in streaks, but when he did cut loose he generally had Houck backing away from him. In all things that were asked at his hand Houck looked like a winner, but he was unable to get Dyson to open up and fight. Dyson found Houck in no dangerous, but he managed to weather the storm. Houck was unable to land a knockout blow, but he mixed him off with stiff jabs to the face. Dyson landed with Houck jabbing him on to prevent Houck from following him.

MENTION MANY TO LEAD YANKS

NEW YORK Nov. 22 Speculation over the place to succeed of Hal Chase, former first baseman of the Americ n League who has resigned as manager of the New York Yankees, was revived in baseball circles to-day.

The most frequently mentioned player was Harry Wolverton manager of the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast League, although Clark Griffith and some others were mentioned.

It is reported that President Frank Farrell of the Yankees might make an attempt to secure Hughey Jennings, the ailing manager of the Detroit Tigers, although the prospects are considered to be very slim. Jennings is laying off in the Detroit training camp.

George Stovall of the Cleveland Naps and Dunn of the Baltimore club of the Eastern League came in for honorable mention.

Chase will not leave the team. He will play first base next season and will get the same salary.

When the new deal was closed, Chase said, I'm too happiest ball player in the world, and I'm sure I can hit .400 next season.

I will know just who will be the manager and President Farrell, that is, by the time the Chase deal comes to a final close.

Desperate Desmond

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

Behind the battlements of the Turkish fort Desmond rejoices in having secured Claude Eclaire, the pernicious hero and lover of the beautiful Rosamond. The villain tells Rosamond that Claude is undoubtedly looking for her in Constantinople, and in view of some of the hero's previous exploits this seems by no means improbable. However, we shall see.

High up in the air floats an Italian flag. The Turks in the fort say, with apparent reason, that the wind must have torn it from some near flag pole. As this will be their only chance of capturing one of the enemy's flags, there is much excitement among the Turks, who are anxious to have some trophy to hang in the mosques at Constantinople, the Ottoman capital.

The flag flutters down to earth, and with barbaric pride the entire garrison rushes out to seize it. It looks like an easy pick-up for a fast sprinter, and every bashi-bazouk runs his best for it. The man who takes an Italian flag to the Sultan usually gets a piastres and a Circassian wife as a reward.

But just as the most bounding bashi-bazouk is about to grasp the precious prize the flag flutters up into the air again, and the soldiers are bitterly disappointed as they see it blow to the feet of the villainous glamour. They do not relish the idea of having a foreigner get away with such a prize.

Just as Desmond is about to grasp the flag gleefully visions of rich rewards from the Sultan before his eyes, he hears an unwelcome voice from the folds of the flag. It is the voice of Claude Eclaire, the man he has wronged so cruelly! Claude had an already concealed beneath the folds of the huge flag.

"Io sono Pnomo," cries Desperate Desmond in his best Italian, "that I guess I got bumped that time." The bersaghert are advancing rapidly, and Claude Eclaire will allow them to deal with the international crook who aided the cause of Italian. It should go hard with Desmond to-morrow's pictures.

The American Girl

By THOMAS TAPPER

No. 2—Her Ideals.

I.

IF is a great thing to sail the sea with a clear idea of the direction you are going.

If you know the coast line is to the east, you can choose your port for landing, or, you can choose many ports, but you must know whether you are going east or west, or north or south; otherwise, you can know nothing about the landing places.

Or, in this way, it pays to live in the world or reality WITH A PORT OF LANDING AHEAD.

This is generally called having an Ideal.

And an Ideal, like a landing on the coast, is a place ahead IN THE DIRECTION YOU ARE TRAVELING. The south thing is the travel. If, however, you are sitting still and waiting, mooning, dreaming, expecting something to turn up, as Micawber did, you are not entertaining an Ideal. You are dreaming or having a nightmare.

An Ideal is that vision of greater and better things TOWARD WHICH YOU TRAVEL EVERY DAY, AND WHICH YOU NEVER REACH, BECAUSE IT KEEPS MOVING ON JUST AHEAD OF YOU.

Everyone who has persistently kept after her Ideal in life has, in her own mind, never fully succeeded, however much success others may think she has won. This is because the nearer she approaches her Ideal, the farther away it moves and the greater it becomes.

II.

Is it a fool game, then, this chasing Ideals?

1. In his last days Victor Hugo declared that he had just begun to touch upon the great world of poetry and romance that he knew to be within himself. Now, he pursued an Ideal, but if one had intimated that he had come up with it he would have turned away in despair. His Ideal had been growing, and he knew the size of it.

2. Mary Lyon, who received very little school education, had an Ideal for other girls—namely, to provide them with a school as good as any school for boys. Beginning without money and without experience, she founded Mt. Holyoke Seminary for Girls.

Was the work of her Ideal school ever finished?

Nor as long as she lived.

3. A college president, over sixty, in his chapel talk one morning, amused even the oldest members of his faculty with his depth of insight into the problem of young men and women in college. One member expressed his admiration to the president for what he had said, and he replied:

"Some of the boys came to see me last night about their life work, and I lay awake until morning thinking about them and their problems. I see farther ahead to-day, than I have ever seen before. I am still following the beckoning Ideal of my profession."

4. Dr. James Hutton, the Scotch physician, chemist and farmer, began to study the structure of the earth. Beginning with little or no conception of the infinite number of years the earth has swung in space, he gradually had to let go of a mental picture of it and construct an Ideal one, or one that to him and the men of his time, was Ideal. He built up his mental picture, and proceeded to work toward it for fifty years. Many people combatted his theory of the great age of the earth because it was not according to sacred history. But the earth tells its own history to one who has learned to read, and Hutton was a curious reader of nature's story. And the more he read, the more wonderfully plain was the story.

III.

An Ideal is a great idea, that leads you on and on, and keeps beckoning you further and farther from the starting point.

If it could come to an end, the Ideal would vanish.

All these people: Victor Hugo, Mary Lyon, the college president and Dr. Hutton, were not chasers of dreams, or dreamers of things impossible.

THEY BASED THEIR IDEALS ON THE REAL WORLD ABOUT THEM.

Then they began their journey.

In their cases, and in all cases of great Ideals, the desire is found to be, not something to have, BUT SOMETHING TO DO AND TO BE.

And the logical basis on which the American Girl should found her Ideals is that which shows how by doing she may become her true self to a greater, and yet greater, degree.

Even to discover an Ideal husband is a poor performance, unless he be kept so, and that requires some doing.

Hence:

The Ideal begins with what you are, and where you are.

You do everything you must do, well.

Then you move on to the next task.

When you have done this a number of times, moving on from one task to the next, you begin to feel the motion.

Then the train toward the Ideal has started, and you are a first-class passenger, with a through ticket, all paid for.

HE gave a few hurried directions, and in a few minutes the veranda and the surroundings were flooded with the strong rays of the searchlight.

A yell of dismayed surprise went up. In spite of a certain sheltering of their awe, in none of the natives on the estate had Martindale yet succeeded in destroying the divinity with which "John Sage" was invested in their minds. It was to the fear engendered by the strong individuality of John Sage that the inhabitants of the bungalow owed their lives so far, though no one there that night realized this. The light revealed a scene of activity, hurrying figures, cluttered women; the men were all armed—even Victor, the thin, girlish-looking boy who acted as Kitty's special servant, carried an obsolete gun, at an angle that suggested peril to none but himself.

Shouted Short Command.

It was obvious that the men were lining themselves up in a sort of martial array.

Martindale shouted out a short command; at the sound of his voice there went up a murmur among the gathered servants. One of the number detached himself—Nokoto, the cook—a great shambling giant of a man who carried concealed in his cloth the long murderous knife that he used for dismembering the carcasses of the great beasts that were brought in by the hunters.

He shuffled forward to the curb within speaking range of the veranda, then cried in English:

"What you want, you Sahz?"

Martindale's lips curled away from his teeth suddenly. To the woman watching the scene from the hidden vantage of the room behind the veranda it seemed as though into this man had once more entered the spirit of the other man who was dead. If John Sage would have looked, showing his teeth suddenly, like a great, easily angered dog. So John Sahz would have spoken, as rifle and dog snorted now!

"Why are you armed? How dare you carry arms! Lay down that knife."

The black laughed.

"No, that fine too much, you John Sahz?" he cried. "I go join bush people till all same singer this man"——

The sentence snapped suddenly. Without warning, yet without undue haste, Martindale had aimed and fired. The great bulk of the cook, the broad grin like a white gash across his black face, swayed for a moment, then, like some slowly collapsing pneumatic thing, he fell forward on his face, with arms spread out on the floor like one crucified.

Martindale pointed a contemptuous finger to the fallen man.

"There is your leader!" he cried, "carry him away. Now—who is for me—and who is for your brothers in the open? Answer me quickly."

The answer was a dead silence that lasted for a moment, and was then broken only by the clatter of discarded arms.

Against Besiegers

The mutiny among the servants of the bungalow appeared to have been short-lived. Perhaps it had never been very whole-hearted. They belonged to a different tribe from the slaves up in the village—they had never known the bondage of the yoke, they had never felt the lash of Ernest's whip. On the whole, they liked their master, and they adored with the somewhat feline adoration of the negro their mistress. To a man they had declared against the besiegers.

"Close the stockade!" Martindale cried. To Harding he gave sharp orders to serve out suitable weapons from the stores to those capable of using them, as he hurried off to see after the defences.

So far the advantage was with him. But he felt no sanguine hopes. Those that were against them were more than those who were with them. And they had behind them the strength of the memory of terrible wrongs.

* * *

As Kitty had prophesied, no attack was made on the bungalow that night—but lest they should forget the thing that awaited them—from the plains beyond, quite clear now, so near that the sound of it seemed to strike in Kitty's heart like a physical blow, came the hollow booming of the war drum, the fierce chanting voices of the self-emancipated slaves.

For a moment or two, in the stress of the preparations, Kitty found herself alone with the man she loved.

"Jack—if there is any fear—any fear—of the worst happening, you'll tell me; you promise me that." Her voice was quite fearless, for all its note of horror.

"I promise you that." Martindale's face was set and grim; his arm tightened about her. "But I don't need to promise you that—there need be no fear of that in your heart—we'll beat them off. Daring and I—and you can handle a rifle like a man if the worst comes, Kitty—and we're three or four fine marksmen among our men—the most trustworthy of the lot, too, thank God."

"Oh, I'm afraid." She shivered, pressing against him in the darkness. "God is angry with us, Jack. It is the reckoning—I knew it must come one day."

"Kitty, that's not my brave wife who speaks!"

"No, it is the weak woman who loves you. Oh, Jack—even if this is the end—whatever the price—it has been worth it. Say that—say that."

Their Lips Met

He could feel the eager warmth of her soft body pressed against him; the scent of English violets from her hair intoxicated him like a breath of Spring. Yes, it was worth it; worth the sin, worth the shame—worth even the glimpse down into hell he had caught these last few weeks to have possessed the joy of this woman and her love.

The almost savage pressure of his arm about her answered her without his low, whispered words.

"I love you," and again, "How I love you!"

Their lips met in a long kiss that, it seemed to the woman next to the room behind the veranda it seemed as though into this man had once more entered the spirit of the other man who was dead. If John Sage would have looked, showing his teeth suddenly, like a great, easily angered dog. So John Sahz would have spoken, as rifle and dog snorted now!

"Why are you armed? How dare you carry arms! Lay down that knife."

The black laughed.

So far the advantage was with him. But he felt no sanguine hopes. Those that were against them were more than those who were with them. And they had behind them the strength of the memory of terrible wrongs.

* * *

As Kitty had prophesied, no attack was made on the bungalow that night—but lest they should forget the thing that awaited them—from the plains beyond, quite clear now, so near that the sound of it seemed to strike in Kitty's heart like a physical blow, came the hollow booming of the war drum, the fierce chanting voices of the self-emancipated slaves.

For a moment or two, in the stress of the preparations, Kitty found herself alone with the man she loved.

"Jack—if there is any fear—any fear—of the worst happening, you'll tell me; you promise me that." Her voice was quite fearless, for all its note of horror.

"I promise you that." Martindale's face was set and grim; his arm tightened about her. "But I don't need to promise you that—there need be no fear of that in your heart—we'll beat them off. Daring and I—and you can handle a rifle like a man if the worst comes, Kitty—and we're three or four fine marksmen among our men—the most trustworthy of the lot, too, thank God."

"Oh, I'm afraid." She shivered, pressing against him in the darkness. "God is angry with us, Jack. It is the reckoning—I knew it must come one day."

"Kitty, that's not my brave wife who speaks!"

"No, it is the weak woman who loves you. Oh, Jack—even if this is the end—whatever the price—it has been worth it. Say that—say that."

Their Lips Met

He could feel the eager warmth of her soft body pressed against him; the scent of English violets from her hair intoxicated him like a breath of Spring. Yes, it was worth it; worth the sin, worth the shame—worth even the glimpse down into hell he had caught these last few weeks to have possessed the joy of this woman and her love.

The almost savage pressure of his arm about her answered her without his low, whispered words.

"I love you," and again, "How I love you!"

Their lips met in a long kiss that, it seemed to the woman next to the room behind the veranda it seemed as though into this man had once more entered the spirit of the other man who was dead. If John Sage would have looked, showing his teeth suddenly, like a great, easily angered dog. So John Sahz would have spoken, as rifle and dog snorted now!

"Why are you armed? How dare you carry arms! Lay down that knife."

The black laughed.

"No, that fine too much, you John Sahz?" he cried. "I go join bush people till all same singer this man"——

The sentence snapped suddenly. Without warning, yet without undue haste, Martindale had aimed and fired. The great bulk of the cook, the broad grin like a white gash across his black face, swayed for a moment, then, like some slowly collapsing pneumatic thing, he fell forward on his face, with arms spread out on the floor like one crucified.

Martindale pointed a contemptuous finger to the fallen man.

"There is your leader!" he cried, "carry him away. Now—who is for me—and who is for your brothers in the open? Answer me quickly."

The answer was a dead silence that lasted for a moment, and was then broken only by the clatter of discarded arms.

Against Besiegers

The mutiny among the servants of the bungalow appeared to have been short-lived. Perhaps it had never been very whole-hearted. They belonged to a different tribe from the slaves up in the village—they had never known the bondage of the yoke, they had never felt the lash of Ernest's whip. On the whole, they liked their master, and they adored with the somewhat feline adoration of the negro their mistress. To a man they had declared against the besiegers.

"Close the stockade!" Martindale cried. To Harding he gave sharp orders to serve out suitable weapons from the stores to those capable of using them, as he hurried off to see after the defences.

So far the advantage was with him. But he felt no sanguine hopes. Those that were against them were more than those who were with them. And they had behind them the strength of the memory of terrible wrongs.

SCALP CLEANSED DANDRUFF GONE

J. C. Orebaugh, of Anderson, Ind., Says Resinol Soap Is Perfect

The wonderful soothing and curative properties of Resinol Soap have made it one of the most popular remedies for every trouble of the skin and scalp on the market to-day. While Resinol Soap was enough to rid this man of dandruff, such trifling cases receive two-fold results from Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. Read his letter:

"I have used Resinol Soap upon my scalp to cleanse it from dandruff, and find it is the most perfect soap I have ever used. I feel very grateful to you for the sample of same, which has convinced me of its merits."

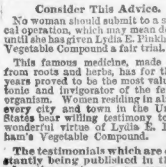
J. C. OREBAUGH, Anderson, Ind.

Resinol Ointment is a hospital and home necessity—the skin's best friend, and always ready help and protection in time of skin trouble, whether it be the accidental scald, burn, or cut, or the rash, carbuncles, eruptions, eczema, inflamed piles, pimply affection, barber's itch, or anything else which affects the skin. Its purity is guaranteed. Resinol Soap is another essential to the skin's health and comfort. It is thoroughly medicinal and antiseptic, soothing and refreshing. It is more than a soap. It is a protection, for its continuous use keeps one free from skin troubles. Gradwate nurses everywhere recommend it and use it for baby's bath. Your druggist is familiar with the efficacy of Resinol Ointment, and will sell it to you in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes, or, if free trial is desired, write for sample to Department 91, Resinol Chemical Co., Baltimore, Md.

OTTUMWA WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and nervous prostration was horrid. I tried many doctors in different forms to no avail. I had the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to you for my cure."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WARNER, 524 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.



Consider This Advice.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, till she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous medicine, made only from roots and herbs, has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtues of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The testimonials which are constantly being published in these advertisements are guaranteed to be absolutely genuine.

Anty Drudge Talks about Wall Paper.

Mrs. Nayber—"See how soiled and dingy this wall paper looks. And it's only been on a few weeks. Oh, I'm disgusted trying to keep my kitchen neat and clean!"

Anty Drudge—"I'll tell you, my dear. If you'd use Fels-Naptha soap and not fill your kitchen with steam from boiling clothes, your wall paper would look nice. And you'd do your washing with less work, in less time and get the clothes cleaner, whiter, and sweeter than you ever did by the old method of boiling."

You can't blame the clothes if you boil all the life out of them and then rub them to shreds against a washboard.

You don't wear them out; you wash them out.

You give them harder wear that way in one day than you can possibly give them in a whole week on your back—

It's all in the soap you use.

Fels-Naptha helps the wear.

It's just as gentle with clothes as the finest toilet soap is with the skin.

You don't have to boil the wash with Fels-Naptha. You use cool or lukewarm water; that won't weaken the fabric.

And you don't stand over a steaming tub, rubbing and scrubbing to loosen the dirt—

Fels-Naptha dissolves the dirt.

Just soap the clothes thoroughly; let them soak for about thirty minutes; then rinse.

It saves you a lot of time and coal and labor and you get better results than you can possibly get with hot-water-and-scrub soaps.

Fels-Naptha is best for household cleaning too.

Follow the directions on the red and green wrapper.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCKS GAIN IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Union Pacific with a gain of from ⅝ to ⅞, assumed the leadership of the stock market at the opening to-day. After opening at 174½ this stock rose steadily on persistent buying until it reached 175⅝, a gain of 1¼.

Strength was shown at the outset in all the important issues and gains were made throughout the list. However, Third Avenue Traction was an exception opening 1¼ lower. United States Steel common, after opening at 64¼, a gain of ⅝, made as the other advance, its aggregate gain in fifteen minutes being ¾.

The copper shares were in brisk demand. Anaconda advanced 1¼ to 30¾. Amalgamated opened ⅝ higher, American Smelter gained ⅝ and Utah was also higher. Consolidation in the copper trade are said to be better than they have been for several years. The Wabash issue showed better tone. B. & O. after opening at 102⅝, crossed 103, for a gain of ⅝, similar to other advances, its aggregate gain in fifteen minutes being ¾.

The report of the Railway Securities Commission, now in the hands of President Taft, will be a bullish argument on railroad stocks and bonds, no matter how severe it may be. The reason for this is that government supervision of railroad issues will be in effect a thorough examinee of their value by the government.

$ $ $

North Dakota, which calamity howlers declared last Summer would have no crops for the railroads to haul, is now completely out of the shortage class. Even should the shortage is not serious, and that it seems nothing can be done about it, business is better than had been anticipated.

$ $ $

Increase of the Atlantic Coast Line dividend was verification of a rumor that has been in circulation for about six years. This is the year rumors come true, and when one remembers that Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Rubber and American Beet Sugar are actually paying dividends, the dividends on Consolidated Gas, Reading and Atlantic Coast Line are small potatoes indeed, how each one doubt that the Lehigh Valley really intends to do some segregating?

$ $ $

The condition of the copper metal market seems to be better than for several months. Consumption of stocks has been below the normal in this country, but the low prices have encouraged its use, so that now there is a healthy growth. The industrial boom in Europe continues. It seems that the backward movement noted a month ago was only temporarily checked, and not a collapse. It was due largely to fears of war. Now the copper stocks have been neglected and present conditions seem to justify speculative attention. The really good coppers are much too low, such stocks as Utah, Nevada Consolidated and Chino being under their speculative value compared with Amalgamated. The latter issue is sometimes proportionately lower than the others. On the basis of its exchange for Utah, it ought to be selling around 22.

$ $ $

Third Avenue's victory in the Court of Appeals means much to the speculative world. Shorn of all the technicalities it means that Third Avenue can reorganize without the approval of the Public Service Commission. If Third Avenue can do so, then Metropolitan will be able to. Another position now is that both companies will reorganize immediately. The only difficult plan of reorganizing the Metropolitan is agreed upon, it will be impossible to figure out the market possibilities of the stock. The plan presented some months ago was merely in the way of a suggestion. The Metropolitan report will have to be assessed, but the Interborough-Metropolitan Company and chief holders have ample resources to pay for the reorganization. The Metropolitan stock will have to be assessed, but the Interborough-Metropolitan Company and chief holders have ample resources to pay for the reorganization. The Metropolitan report

Interests to Try Old Trick to Keep Control of the Railroad Commission

The Railroads and Street Railways, with their ramification of interests, have determined upon a ruse to retain for them their control of a majority of the Board of Railroad Commissioners, while they seem to be yielding to the demand for an independent board.

The trick is not new. It is as old and as orthodox as the rule in whist that you should play your second hand low and your third hand high.

The present plan is to permit the Governor's Council to abandon Mr. Clinton White, but to continue the rejection of Professor Droppers until finally either Professor Droppers withdraws his name or the Governor can be persuaded to abandon him.

It is the old policy of bending when the wind is too strong, in order to avoid breaking.

The sacrifice of Mr. White is nothing, because these interests care nothing for Mr. White except for his subserviency, and if now the exposure of that subserviency jeopardizes their control of the board, they will sacrifice him in cold blood and with no compunction.

These corporation interests know that Professor Droppers is beyond their reach, and that when Mr. Droppers acts with Chairman MacLeod, the Board of Railroad Commissioners will cease to be what it has been in recent years, the mere mouthpiece of the powerful public service corporations, and as much more dangerous to the public than an open enemy, as a man whom you trust as a friend is more dangerous, when he betrays you, than a man whom you know is not your friend.

The people of Massachusetts should keep a sharp eye upon this situation. In all the appointments to public office, there is none so important as this position on the Railroad Board. All the appointments together are not so important. The Street Railways and the Railroads touch our lives more closely and affect our prosperity more vitally than the government itself, apart from its control of these public service corporations.

The charge which they make for the transportation of goods, we pay in everything we buy; and the charge which they make for the transportation of ourselves and our families is an addition to the rent which we pay for our homes, if we pay rent, and to the taxes, if we own our homes.

If the charge for carrying us by railroad or street railway is excessive, then it is a reduction of our wages. If the convenience and comfort with which we are transported is not what it ought to be, then it is an addition to the hours which we are obliged to work. Hanging on a strap, standing in the aisles of an overcrowded electric car or train, with the air close and foul, is the hardest part of the average day's work and tires us more than the hardest labor during any equal period of our day's work.

There is nothing which would repay us so well as watching the desperate attempts which the Railroads and Street Railways will make to prevent Professor Droppers from being confirmed.

Governor Foss and the Democratic party invite this issue with the present reactionary Republican Council, trusting that the new council will heed the warnings of the last election.

But if it should come to pass that common sense and the public interests are less heeded than the wishes of the public service corporations by the incoming council, the people of Massachusetts will be asked to express an opinion upon such a situation at the next election.

In Governor Russell's day, concerning a far less important office, the people made known their idea of the factious opposition by the Governor's Council to important appointments.

Does anyone for a moment believe that the citizens of this State want the public service corporations to control their Railroad Commission, the very body they created to control the public service corporations?

That is the issue in the Droppers appointment.

Women in Politics—an Accomplished Fact

It is time to stop discussing the question whether women ought to go into politics. THEY ARE IN.

The establishment of woman's suffrage in the great State of California has fairly turned the scale—and shifted the burden of proof. Henceforth those who would put women out of the field of public life must be regarded as the radicals and innovators.

It is understood that the Chinese revolutionists have promised full political rights to women. The chances are, therefore, that the women of China will wield the plenary power of the ballot before Massachusetts women do. Nevertheless, all observers should be able to see that the women of New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey and other "conservative" American States are—with or without the ballot—already a political power. They are fairly launched upon a political career. They are in politics, and in to stay.

It is certain, for example, that the women teachers of Greater New York exercised a considerable influence in the recent election. In Massachusetts militant suffragists made a "whirlwind campaign" in automobiles from town to town. And in New Jersey the women are making a stubborn and promising legal fight for suffrage—on constitutional grounds.

In Santa Barbara, California, there are 500 more registrations of women than of men. And in Los Angeles the registration of women is so general that they will have an equal voice with the masculine electorate in deciding the stirring issues of next month's municipal election in that city.

Henceforth those who reckon the chances of politics without regard to women will be like the innkeeper's guest, who counts his expenses before he sees the bill.

To Be Satisfied Is to Stand Still

By DR. EDWIN F. BOWERS

THE progress of the world is a perpetual tribute to its dissatisfaction—dissatisfaction with the old order. Had it not been for this God-given attribute we would still be in the condition of our arboreal ancestors—hanging cheerfully by our tails from the branching limbs.

All the marvellous advance which the race has made has been in an effort to improve upon conditions with which it was dissatisfied.

Therefore when some member of the Smug-Sufficient—appreciating finger tips over protuberant abdomen—inquires blandly, "Why not let well enough alone? This world is a pretty good sort of place, if you only knew it," one who has never possessed the ostrich attribute of sticking his brains in the dust of age-old wrongs and denying their existence is impelled to respond somewhat sharply.

Optimism is a splendid thing, but it should be a WORKING, MOVING, VITAL optimism, which says "Yes, the world is growing better; it is infinitely better than it was even ten years ago; but IT IS NO because we are striving constantly to MAKE it better."

This is the optimism which is a creditable asset to its possessor. Not the supine, brutal, callous, well-gorged optimism which insists that "All's well with the world."

For know that the employes engaged in the manufacture of woolen goods—according to the United States Census Bureau—receive only a yearly average of $396, while the cotton workers, who have made an exhaustive study of family budgets, assert that the minimum decent requirement for a family of five is $750 a year.

And this while some of the New England cotton mills are paying their stockholders as much as $67 per share dividends yearly. And not only that, but one company distributed a "stock dividend" of 100 per cent. besides. This is known technically as "cutting a melon," and our old friends, the express robbers, have become adept at this form of operation, from long and lucrative practice.

But our self-sufficient friends who say "Tut-tut, why don't you let well enough alone?" insist that this is the method the Lord intended.

For one Brown baby, with countless millions to squander, thousands of poor wretches must cough their pitiful lives out in the humid, oxygen-impoverished, lint-laden mills of Rhode Island and Fall River. For the purpose of maintaining a few useless parasites in exaggerated affluence, thousands must perforce surrender their very lives—sordid, empty and mean at best.

Why be discontented, indeed! Why deplore the fact that, according to Secretary Nagel of the Department of Commerce and Labor, one-third of the ninety thousand men employed in the steel industry work seven days a week, and one-fourth of them work twelve hours daily on this basis—and they receive the magnificent sum of $476 per year for this!

As a sociologist recently expressed it, "What is the proper name to give to a country which seven hundred and fifty thousand workers are killed and wounded in shops and mines and on the railroads every year; where a vast majority of the working class die prematurely; where diseases caused by overwork, by under-feeding, and from diseases caused by dirt—dirt in the air, in the drinking water and dirt and poisons in the food; where four out of five children in the world are doomed to drudgery and insufficiency, and where light is quenched and ignorance triumphs? If such a place is not fit to be called a hell, what will you call it?"

Are we to continue our

"Rendezvous with Death on the Battlefield,"

Wrong forever on the throne' attitude indefinitely, or are we to persevere in our dissatisfaction—perhaps become even more so, as our knowledge of the world-iniquities increase?

Browning says that "Moreover, the moral sense grows but by exercise," and also that "A man's reach must exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for?"

The true optimist is the man or woman who, with tongue or pen or by example, inveighs against the cruelty, the injustice, the criminality of our present horrible system of industrial slavery—who inspires hope, and confidence, and love; who persistently attempts to better it—who, with heart aflame and the good sword Excalibur in hand, smites the hydra-headed dragon of Oppression whenever opportunity presents.

The Smug Conservative—"Belly with good cupon lined"—who regards this system as the sine qua non of human perfection, is a dangerous foe to humanity in the large. His acquiescent inactivity, his ingenuous countenancing of the criminal indifference and heartless bestiality which is at the bottom of it all, are utterly reprehensible and absolutely indefensible.

I have more respect and admiration for the little Salvation Army lassie, helping a drunken vagabond steady his footsteps on the bottom rung of the ladder—encouraging him to exert the small moiety of manhood which his devilish alcoholic obsession has left him—than I have for any bloated "pillar of society," whose ostentatious philanthropies and obtrusive charities are a stench in the nostrils of those who understand the methods by which he attained to his present eminence.

Some time, not far distant, the query, "How much has he?" will be changed to "Where did he get it?" The present hideous worship of Mammon is but a temporary mania.

Even now the possessors of huge fortunes, who have lost the only thing in the world which is really worth while to a normal man—the respect of their fellows—are currying favor by huge gifts—by princely largesses.

Very good. There is no such thing as tainted money. And the very blood money wrung from the mill operatives in Homestead and Pittsburg, the millions unlawfully secured in criminal rebates—as President Cassatt of the Pennsylvania Railroad cited shortly before his death—are now finding their way back to the public from whom they were filched.

And best of all—so does Destiny shape our ends—they are put to the very purpose which will ultimately make it impossible for future steel magnates to duplicate the "horrible example" of their penitent predecessors.

Man is a gregarious animal. As a "solitary" he is pathological. The association and respect of his fellows are indispensable. When Emerson wrote his essay on "Compensation" he intuitively "felt" this.

So be CONSTRUCTIVELY DISSATISFIED. Do not be a mere whiner, pessimistically complaining because your lot may not be exactly what you could with it to be; but acquire a definite knowledge of WHAT YOU WANT and HOW TO GET IT, and keep hammering away on this line—not only all Summer, but UNTIL YOU GET IT.

And when you finally succeed—which will only be a question of time—"hitch your wagon to a star" and strive with equal ardor for something else—a little nearer the ideal. Browning, you remember, says this. I might have been, but I would not stoop so low.

A noble rage, which quarrels not with INEVITABLES, but with SYSTEMS, is praiseworthy and splendid. A sad-headed, puerile acquiescence is cowardly and inhuman. For the question asked of God, "Am I my brother's keeper?" is answered by modern sociology most decidedly in the affirmative. The toiling slaves in mines, forests and mills are calling piteously for succor. The "cry of the children" resounds through the land. These underlings can be helped only by constructive, OPTIMISTIC DISSATISFACTION. Give them a "white man's chance."

As that brilliant and "overloving" poetess, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, admonishes:

"Give to the world the best you have
And the best will return to you.
And the best we can do for the world is to try and leave it just a little better than we found it.

This is the epic meaning of DISSATISFACTION.

When Morgan Stubs His Toe

By JAMES CLARENCE HARVEY

WHEN Pat McGinnis or Michael McFlynn
From the top of a skyscraper fall,
The ambulance surgeon just rushes them in,
And that is the end of it all.
But Wall Street gets in a hectic flush
And stocks all downward go
And the market harbors a horrible hush
When Morgan stubs his toe.

"It's a terrible thing!" "He's getting old!"
"He's getting weak in the knees!"
In various forms the tale is told;
It's a tragedy, if you please.
"To-day he stumbles," "Tomorrow he'll fall,"
And they weep and wail with woe.
There's ruin and wreck in the put and call
When Morgan stubs his toe.

"He dropped the plate," so the market drops;
"He scattered some checks and bills."
The pulse of the congregation stops,
As apprehension thrills.
Oh! Mr. Morgan, thou king of wealth!
Our solicitude ye know;
Don't pass any platters. Take care of your health,
And please don't stub your toe.

A Mighty Giant Rises from the Ground

The power of China, deadened with opium, superstition, a negative philosophy, and worship of the past, is coming into a new life. No man can estimate the results of this Chinese movement, this waking of the great Dragon from a sleep that has lasted thousands of years.
